Six-State Tillage Event Follows Westward Trend

HAGERSTOWN, Md. — Following agricultural trends associated with the Atlantic slope of the Eastern Continental Divide, the 1991 Mid-Atlantic Conservation Tillage Conference has moved west from previous locations in the Piedmont and Susquehanna Valley areas of Maryland and Pennsylvania.

This year's eighteenth annual event is scheduled Dec. 18 in the Ramada Inn and Convention Center at Hagerstown, Md., just a short hike off the famed Appalachian Trail.

Nearly 800 crop farmers and agribusiness representatives from Delaware, Maryland, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia and West Virginia are expected to attend. Activities will run from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m.

As in past years, the conference is sponsored by the Cooperative Extension Service at land-grand universities in the six participating states, with assistance from interested agribusiness representatives. More than 30 commercial exhibits are expected.

Dr. Gary C. Steinhardt, Extension agronomist at Purdue University, will lead off the morning program with a presentation on identifying and controlling compaction and tilth problems in conservation tillage cropping.

Following a mid-morning break, conference participants will have their choice of attending one

Milk Price Fragments Industry

REMEN, N.Y. — The frustration level among dairymen continues to grow, despite slowly recovering milk prices.

The frustration is beginning to show in numerous ways.

For at least one New York state dairyman, the marginal defeat of the Rogers-Allen Act served as the straw that broke the camel's back.

The approval of the act, though controversial because of legalities being tested in several courts, would have ontinued certain on-farm milk prices and set a higher base price for milk.

COOPERSBURG (Lehigh Co.) — In the old days, farmers didn't worry so much about unstable milk prices. They turned their attention instead to other types of farming — raising hogs, growing a few acres of vegetables, or maintaining a chicken house to make up the loss of income.

The old days haven't gone away on some farms, particularly the Marwell Dairy Farm. Indeed, the Marwell Farm owes its livelihood to the successful maintenance of 80 head of grade Holstein. And they sell Holstein steers. They also sell 1,100 hogs a year and maintain 60 sows . . . . and they raise 800 capons . . . . and about 190 acres of pumpkins and gourds . . . . and 500 peach trees and a vineyard. To top it off, they also operate a fertilizer business.

This diverse farm is operated by Robert R. and Barry Gehman and family. Although the Gehmans didn't purchase the farm until 1967, they celebrated their 32-year farm anniversary early this month.

Recently, the farm was honored as a Dairy of Distinction Farm. It is managed by Robert R. Gehman, wife Adeline, and Robert Jr., in addition to Barry Gehman with help from Barry's wife, Sharon.

COLUMBIA (Lancaster Co.) — "It's sort of frightening, you know. What if you don't do that well?"

Elizabethtown High School student and Lancaster 4-H Club President Mark Tracy shivered in the early evening cold. Tracy watched his fellow team members mill about at the entrance to a machine shop operated by Jim Quanbeck, a beef and cash crop farmer.

It looked liked the scene at the end of "Fahrenheit 451," a film based on the book by Ray Bradbury — people walking about, recalling lines from novels, practicing the chapter and verse of books that no longer exist for the benefit of future generations.

And like the film's characters, the 4-H livestock team knows the importance of practice. The team has been preparing for the event known as the North American International Livestock Expo (NAILE), which opens today and continues through next week.

Compete against teams

In Louisville, Ky. on Tuesday, the senior division of the Lancaster County 4-H Livestock Judging Team, which placed first in the state, will compete against teams from many other states for the NATIONAL EGG MARKET - AT A GLANCE· Prices were unchanged to lower in the Northeast, and Midwest, and unchanged on the balance. The market tone was steady to weak, mostly barely steady. Demand covered the full range, and was mostly moderate. Retail specials boosted movement, and some areas reported increased first of the month business, while other areas were disappointed with the continued sluggish demand. Supplies were adequate to ample, mostly adequate to fully adequate, and occasionally barely adequate in the Northeast where features depleted supply. Breakers remained unaggressive buyers of surplus shell eggs. Live hen markets were mixed from barely steady to fully steady.

N.Y. & Phila. Frozen Eggs

Nov. 5, 1991

Prices continued their downward spiral. Trading activity was mixed with lower trending values enticing some buyers. Raw materials were usually readily available, but breakers were cautious and attempted to limit receipts to regular commitments. Floor stocks were for the most part in good balance for current dealer needs.

FRIDAY - NOV. 15 - 10:30 A.M. - 2:30 P.M.

Hickok Enterprises and Pennfield Feeds cordially invite cattle finishers or those interested in finishing dairy beef to see Hickok Enterprises all new partially slatted beef growing barn. Hickok Enterprises has built this 400 head facility to produce high quality Dairy Beef Steers that weigh 400-500 lbs. for sale to beef finishers. These calves have been raised on the Tend-R-Leen Dairy Beef Program, are uniform in size and weight, are properly vaccinated, and ready for the Tend-R-Leen finishing program.

The original no-roughage feeding program

Tend-R-Leen:
A Profitable Way to Feed Beef Cattle.

The Tend-R-Leen program is simple and convenient with no complicated formulas. Cattle eat only whole shelled corn, rolled milo or barley supplemented with the Tend-R-Leen formula and mineral.

The Tend-R-Leen program eliminates roughage feeding, expensive storage and processing. There is no grinding; less equipment and labor are needed. And there's up to 50% less manure produced.

The Tend-R-Leen program gets animals to market weight in 12 months or less.

You'll Get Consistent, Risk-Free Performance From New Funk's G® Brand Hybrids

4393 105 Days
4472 110 Days
4530 113 Days
4624 118 Days

New Funk's G brand hybrids deliver consistent performance even under the stress of heat, drought, marginal soils or disease pressures. So you'll get virtually risk-free performance in good years — and in bad years.

Backed by CIBA-GEIGY research

You see, these hybrids are backed by nine years of CIBA-GEIGY Seed Division research. With local testing in growing conditions just like yours. That kind of research produces hybrids capable of standing up to anything mother nature has to offer. Hybrids that maximize your profit potential, while minimizing your risks.

Get complete performance

Plus, you get performance across the board. With big yields. But with 95% or better standability... 25% or less moisture... and intactness ratings under four. And you get all that in the maturity groups you need to spread your risks even more.

Limit your risks

Get risk-free performance on your farm today by calling Hoffman Seeds, Inc. You'll enjoy the peace of mind that comes from planting these new Funk's G brand hybrids.

OPINION

A Very Good Time To Write A Letter Of Appreciation For FFA

National recognition will be given to FFA members from across the nation this week, as the world's largest annual youth convention is held in Kansas City, MO. We're talking about the 64th National FFA Convention where more than 24,000 FFA members, guests and supporters meet for action-packed sessions and addresses by top speakers from the fields of agriculture, government and entertainment.

The keynote speaker on the program is none other than George Bush, president of the United States. But other speakers are also impressive. Carolyn Suzanne Sapp, 1992 Miss America; Captain Gerald Coffee, former POW; Scott McKain, former national FFA secretary; and Jack Parnell, former Deputy Secretary of Agriculture; to name a few of the speakers. In addition, the participantants have the opportunity to meet their young peers from all 50 states, Guam, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands.

Of course, many awards will be given at the national level. And new national officers will be named. And while this one convention is important in the life of the National FFA Association, it's the every day activities of the 7,744 local chapters preparing for leadership and careers in the science, business and technology of agriculture that is really important.

In many local school districts, the FFA program is under attack from urban sentiments and budget restraints. But when you consider the importance of agriculture to the national economy, and the education received by the 382,748 national members, the FFA chapters across the country deserve better support from all segments of the public.

Now is the time to write a letter of appreciation for your local FFA chapter. This letter should be sent to the school board president, the supervising principal, and any other opinion leader in your school district. With the national convention in the news, it's a very good time to write this letter.

To Keep Guns Away From Children

The past week I have read two incidents where small children have accidently killed family members with a gun. In both cases the children thought the gun was a toy.

This reminds us the importance of keeping guns under lock and key and away from children. Also, we need to teach children to respect guns and the proper procedure for handling guns.

With hunting season here, take time to properly store your guns when not hunting and never allow children to play with your guns. Taking a few extra precautions now could prevent a serious accident and even the loss of a loved one.

Benefits of Winter Cover Crops

Cover crops have been grown for many years to protect soils from winter rains. When crops such as corn, soybeans, and tobacco are harvested, the soil is unprotected during the winter months, when much soil erosion may take place.

Cover crops also provide additional organic matter for soil tilth improvement when plowed down in the spring. A recent advantage associated with the growing of cover crops is the reduction in the amount of nitrogen which will leach in the soil.

Remember, nitrogen is only leachable in the nitrate form. Nitrates are formed from other sources of nitrogen during the growing season by soil microbes. At the end of the growing season there are unused nitrates in the soil.

Cover crops may reduce that amount by up to 120 pounds. Also, cover crops use other plant nutrients and provide an excellent spring feed for livestock. Do not forget the important role cover crops may play in developing a nutrient management plan and protecting water quality.

To Consider Restructuring Your Business

The current economic situation forces all businesses to reexamine themselves and find ways to become more competitive. This is especially true for our farms.

This is called strategic planning. Strategic planning involves finding the answers to many questions. These questions include: 1. What are our strengths? 2. Where can we improve our operations? 3. What things do we need to do to become more profitable? 4. How are we going to pass the business to the next generation? 5. What records do we need to keep? 6. What will be the consumer demands for the next 10 years? and 7. What type of activities should the farm be involved in?

These and other questions start helping you to focus on what your farm will look like in the year 2000. By developing a plan to restructure your farm now and then starting to implement it will help you stay competitive.

The business environment is changing at a faster rate than ever. The successful farms will be the ones that identify shifts in consumer demands and make the necessary adjustments. As you develop your plan, take advantage of the help available through your banker, farm and community organizations, cooperative extension, readings, and meetings.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

WHEN LIFE ISN'T FAIR

November 10, 1991

Background Scripture: Acts 21:17-40; 22:25 through 23:11.

Devotional Reading: 2 Corinthians 6:1-10.

Life is often full of irony. We often assume that if we do rightly, things will generally work out with some degree of fairness. Intellectually, we know that isn't necessarily true, but at some deep, gut level, that expectation is often indelibly recorded and becomes dominant in our expectations.

We are surprised to find that in situations where we have not done rightly — or as rightly as we might have done — we sometimes are spared the penalty or consequences we know that fairness demands. That's what makes it seem so unfair when, having done rightly in a particular situation, it still turns out badly for us.

Several years ago, I was entrusted with the management of some assets for a member of my family. There have been times in my life when I have been careless or stupid, but in this particular responsibility I did my best and my best was productive of good results. Nevertheless, I have been penalized for doing the job I was asked to do and I have repeatedly complained, "It isn't fair! It just isn't fair!"

GOOD PEOPLE, BAD DEALS

And it isn't fair — but I am always reminded that life is not fair and no one has ever promised that it would be. There are lots of times when good people get bad deals. And there is never any guarantee that, if we do rightly, we will be rewarded or even receive equitable treatment. So, when that happens — when life is not fair — how do we handle it?

There is irony in that, although there were times when Paul clearly acted or spoke in a way that was sure to give offense to the Jews, in Acts 22 and 23 Paul is doing all the right things. Upon arrival in Jerusalem, he reports on his mission to the elders of the church there. When the elders advise him to demonstrate his respect for the law by joining four men who have taken a vow to perform the Jewish purification rite. They assure him: "Thus all will know that there is nothing in what they have been told about you but that you yourself live in observance of the law" (21:24b).

SUPPOSING WRONGLY

Paul does all the right things, but it still turns out unfairly. Although he had not taken any Greeks into the temple area — an act punishable by death — some of his foes assume that he did: "For they had previously seen Trophimus the Ephesian with him in the city, and they supposed that Paul had brought him into the temple" (21:29). When a riot breaks out and Paul is beaten, Roman soldiers, assuming that Paul is an Egyptian rebel bent upon revolt, take him into custody. Then, when rioting breaks out again, the tribune, not knowing that Paul was a Roman citizen, has him scourged to extract evidence from him. This is unjust because it is not legal to scourge an unconvicted Roman citizen.

How does Paul handle all of these injustices? He informs the tribune of his citizenship and tries to reason with the mob. In other words, he does what he can, but he doesn't fly into a rage or fall into a depression because he is being treated unfairly. He doesn't like it, and he'll do whatever he can to get justice, but he knows his injustice is because of his commitment to Christ and he will not give up his commitment — even if it means being treated unfairly.

THE OLD FARMER'S ALMANAC

NOV. 11-17, 1991

Sadie Hawkins Day, Nov. 16

Nov. 11, 1918, World War I ends as the armistice is signed in the Forest of Compiegne, France... Nov. 12, 1920, Judge K.M. Landis is elected the first "Czar" of baseball. He will rule absolutely over the 16 American and National League Baseball Clubs... Nov. 13, 1927, the first underwater tunnel in the United States, the Holland Tunnel, opens to traffic between Jersey City, N.J., and New York City....Nov. 14, 1888, the first American golf club is organized, St. Andrew's Golf Club in Yonkers, N.Y. Marry in a growing moon for good luck

Ask the Old Farmer: How did our American "keep to the right" traffic ruling originate? Most of our laws came from England, but they still drive on the left. R.H., N.C. Don't know about the English, but we "kept to the right" because a man driving an ox team walked on the larboard (left) side of his cattle so he wouldn't get shoved into the bushes off the roadside

Home Hints: Keep lettuce leaves crisp by sealing them along with a lemon in a plastic bag.

OLD FARMER'S WEATHER FORECAST

New England: A changeable week: first heavy rain and warm, then sunny and mild. Finally, more heavy rain and warm again, but ending with cold and showers.

Greater New York-New Jersey: The week begins with rain, heavy in the south; and warm temperatures. Clear and cool, followed by more rain, then clearing again.

Middle Atlantic Coastal: Rain is ending as the week begins; clearing and turning milder. Becoming rainy and warm again, but turning cold to end the week.

Piedmont & Southeast Coastal: Rainy and warm then clearing and turning milder, followed by a few more days of rain. The weekend is cloudy and cold with sprinkles.

N.Y. Grange Meets, Passes Resolutions

CORTLAND, N.Y. — Dozens of resolutions, from one condemning the expansion of the Montezuma Wildlife Refuge to another that lays out a policy for state legislative reform, were approved last week by delegates to the annual convention of the New York State Grange.

The Grange, a rural/fraternal organization that has its state headquarters here, passed those resolutions during four days of discussion and debate at the Sheraton Inn in Batavia. More than 200 delegates represented some 400 Grange units from across the state, and their decisions at the convention lay the foundation for Grange positions this year.

Many of the resolutions will be considered for approval next month at the Grange's National Convention in Burlington, Vt. Resolutions evolve from committees focusing on agriculture, conservation, education, public welfare, taxation and insurance, and transportation.,

The Grange's legislative department has long opposed the proposed expansion of the Montezuma Wildlife Refuge, and delegates reinforced that opposition in claiming that such an expansion — from 7,000 acres to 36,000 acres — would devastate local agricultural endeavors and would erode the local property tax base.

The Grange's position on legislative reform also reflected a year-long campaign to improve the way our state leaders conduct business. Grangers called for:

- Removal of the exemption of the sate legislature from the Open Meetings Law.
- Ending all-night legislative sessions typical of the budget process by restricting hours during which bills may be considered.
- The elimination of specially created political favor positions.
- The elimination of lulus for legislative titles which hold minimal or no responsibilities.
- The filing in one place of all records listing campaign contributions and expenditures.
- The acceptance of a vote from a legislator only if he or she is present at the time of that vote.

"Our annual session is very important," said Grange master William Benson. "It allows us to formulate policy for the coming year. We'll work hard on these issues and we'll try to influence some positive change."

Farm Leaders Asked To Support Compensation Reform

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.)— State Agricultural Secretary Boyd E. Wolff recently urged leaders of Pennsylvania agricultural organizations to support Gov. Robert P. Casey's proposals to curb the skyrocketing costs of workers' compensation insurance.

Meeting with the leaders of 14 organizations, Wolff said the governor's plan deserves support from farmers.

"The governor's plan shows us what can be done to protect agricultural employers from these extraordinary costs," Wolff said. "One of the main points of the governor's plan addresses the special needs of farm employers who are among those hardest hit by these escalating insurance rates."

The Workers Compensation Rating Bureau, a private-sector entity representing 317 insurance firms, has filed a 52 percent rate increase request with the State Insurance Department. Public hearings on that request began recently in Harrisburg.

At the direction of Governor Casey, Secretary of Labor and Industry Thomas Foley and Secretary of Commerce Andrew T. Greenberg recently asked the Insurance Commissioner to reject the 52 percent increase request.

Gov. Casey's reform proposal would change the law to permit small businesses, such as farm employers, to group together to qualify as self-insurers, thereby reducing their premium costs. The proposal also calls for medical cost containment, increased workplace safety efforts, and increased premium competition between insurance companies.

Officials from the Pennsylvania Department of Labor and Industry and the Insurance Department also attended the meeting.

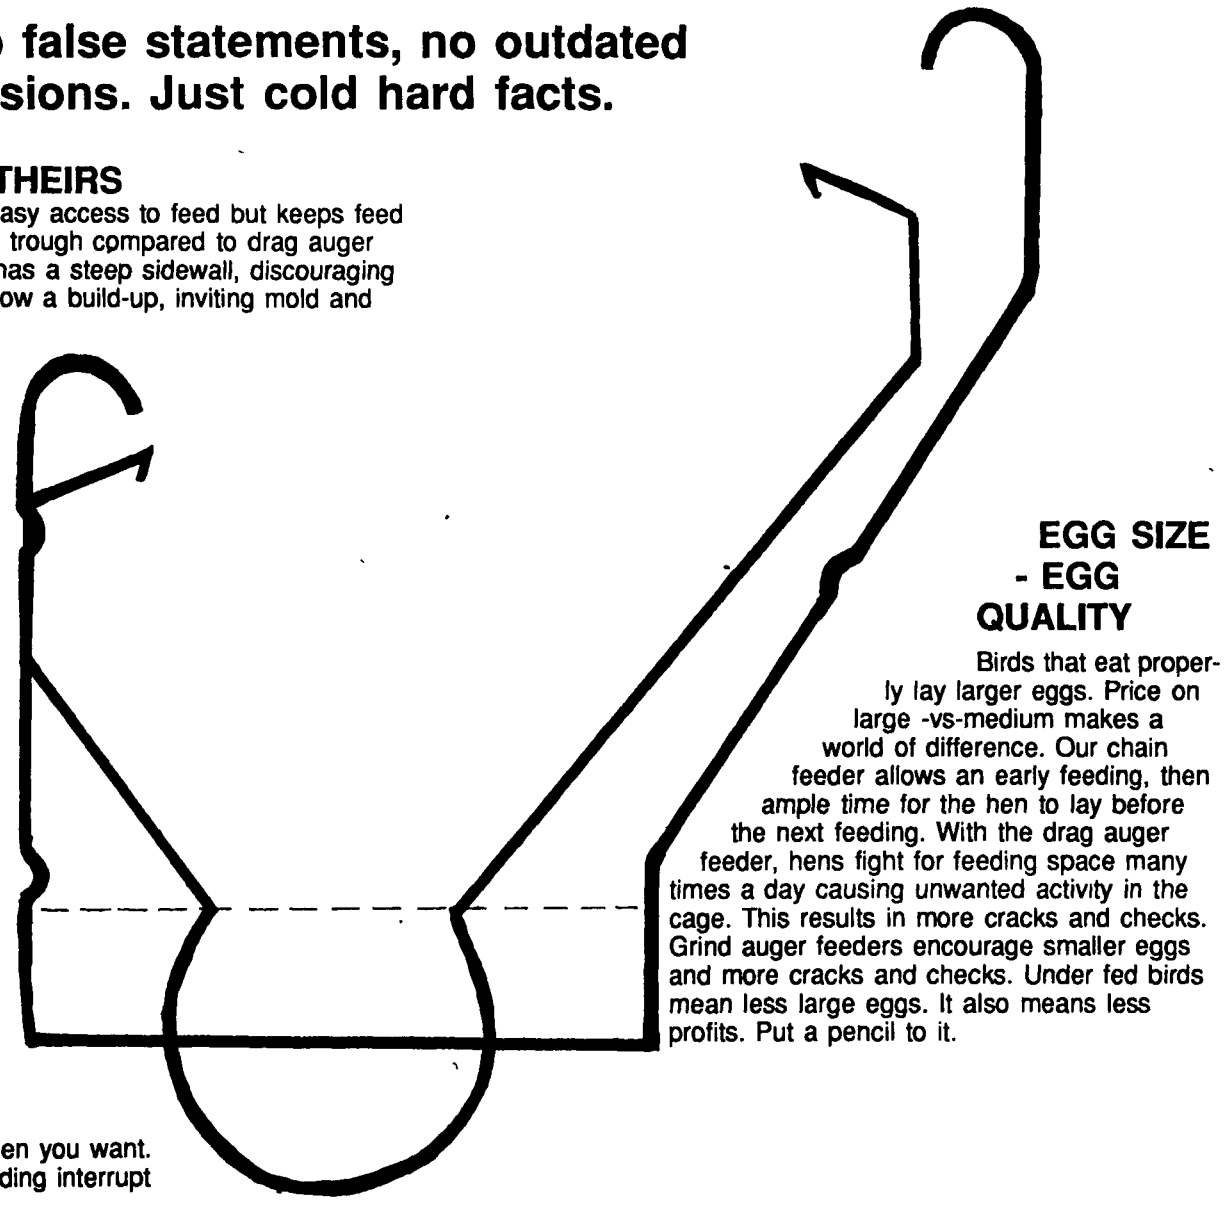
No gimmicks, no false statements, no outdated drawings, no illusions. Just cold hard facts.



DESIGN...OURS AND THEIRS
Our chain feeder trough allows easy access to feed but keeps feed levels further below the lip of the trough compared to drag auger trough. Our chain feeder trough has a steep sidewall, discouraging feed build-up. Their slope can allow a build-up, inviting mold and disease. Our trough is "ribbed" for strength... theirs is built for price alone.

FEEDING SPACE
Actual feeding space with the grind auger is skimpy. In fact our chain feeder has 2½ times more feeding space per bird. This allows the chain feeder to run as few as three times per day while the auger must run eight or more times per day. Chain carries feed and supplies a uniform ration, with no feed waste. With the drag auger, birds turn sideways to eat requiring more length of feeder.

Approx. Feed Level →

FEED CONTROL
Our chain feeding system does not dictate a feeding program. You are in control, feeding as little or as much as you want when you want. Drag auger feeders' frequent feeding interrupt birds during peak laying periods.

EGG SIZE - EGG QUALITY
Birds that eat properly lay larger eggs. Price on large -vs-medium makes a world of difference. Our chain feeder allows an early feeding, then ample time for the hen to lay before the next feeding. With the drag auger feeder, hens fight for feeding space many times a day causing unwanted activity in the cage. This results in more cracks and checks. Grind auger feeders encourage smaller eggs and more cracks and checks. Under fed birds mean less large eggs. It also means less profits. Put a pencil to it.

REPAIR AND MAINTENANCE
The hardest part of repairing a chain feeder is remembering where you left the hammer and chain breaker tool some months back. With an auger system, the need for a welder, torch and grinder is almost routine. Down time is up, and repair hours and expense rise.

THE TEST OF TIME
Our chain feeder seems never to wear out. Some thirty year old units are still performing, day in and day out. On the other hand, some "short term" grind auger systems are beginning to show their weaknesses. Time is the enemy of the grind auger system. Just a little time.

Most local egg producers have already seen The Real Picture and are rethinking chain -vs- drag auger feeding. If you are feeding with a drag auger system, we invite you to take a better look at The Real Picture. Our goal is to help you make a profit, and chain feeding plays the leading role.

How To Price Corn Silage

The following information on pricing was compiled by Lehan Power, Extension Farm Economist in Bradford County. Although it is getting to you late in the harvest, it may answer your questions this year, as well as, being a valuable reference for the 1992 harvest season.

Pricing High-Moisture Corn

In recent years it has become common practice to buy and sell high-moisture corn. The question we frequently are asked is "What is the right price?"

The price should be based on the price or anticipated price of dry cown. However, harvesting, transportation and drying cost should also be considered by both the buyer and the seller.

There are two formulas that may be used to calculate what a weight of grain at a given level of the dry matter would equal in dry bushel equivalents.

For high-moisture ear corn pounds of wet corn X dry matter (expressed as a decimal) + 59.8 = bushels of dry shelled corn.

As an example 9,000 pounds of ear corn X .65 dry matter (35% moisture) + 59.8 = 98 bushels of dry shelled corn equivalent.

For high-moisture shelled corn pounds of wet shelled corn X dry matter (expressed as a decimal) + = bushels of dry shelled corn.

An example would be, 35,000 pounds of wet shelled corn X .7 dry matter (30% moisture) + 47.8 = 512 bushels of dry shelled corn equivalent.

At this point, an agreed upon shelled corn price may be used to calculate the value of the high-moisture corn. Remember- Trading based on unharvested corn, harvesting, hauling and avoided drying costs should be considered!

Corn Silage Pricing

At this time of year we receive almost daily questions regarding the price of corn silage, from both buyers and sellers. There is a long and a short answer to this question.

The short answer is that corn silage is worth about one-third of the price of Mixed Mostly Legume Hay (MMLH). If MMLH is worth $100.00 in the mow, then corn silage is worth approximately $33.00 in the silo.

The longer and probably more accurate answer follows.

First, let's take a look at the value of corn silage based on the price of dry shelled corn.

TABLE #1

Net Value of Corn Silage as a Dairy Feed (1)

55% (2)	29 33	31 35	33-37	35-39	37-41

(1) Value after deducting storage/feeding loss; (2) Silage dryer than 60% has more feeding loss.

Next we'll go out on a limb and give some estimated values for "abnormal" corn silage. This could be caused by dry weather, early frost, late planting or some other reason.

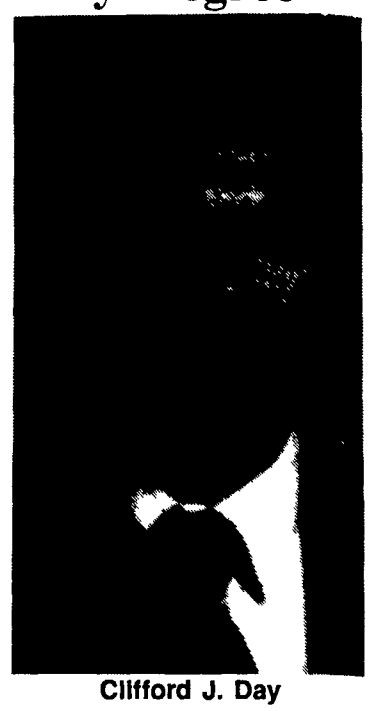
FFA Nominates Day For Honorary Degree

KANSAS CITY, Mo.— Clifford J. Day, agricultural education instructor and FFA advisor at Garden Spot High School, has been nominated to receive the Honorary American FFA Degree.

Day was nominated for the degree by the Pennsylvania FFA Association. The nomination was approved by the National FFA board of directors at their recent meeting in Alexandria, Va.

The Honorary American FFA Degree is the highest honorary award presented by the FFA. This year, 73 teachers of agricultural education were nominated to receive the degree during the 64th National FFA Convention in Kansas City, Mo., November 14-16.

Day has been an agricultural education instructor at Garden Spot for 21 years. During that time, he has had 14 students who have earned the American FFA Degree, 138 students who have received the State FFA Degree, 19 students who have earned state proficiency awards, 10 state officers, and eight finalists in the National Proficiency Award program.



Clifford J. Day

Each year at least 50 of the 11,200 teachers of agricultural education in the nation are awarded the Honorary American FFA Degree. The degree is awarded on the basis of points scored by a teacher for accomplishments as an agricultural instructor, FFA advisor, and participant in professional agricultural teachers' organizations.

Teachers are awarded points for each student they have supervised who has earned state or national FFA awards. Teachers also

Estimated Value of Abnormal Corn Silage in Relation to Normal Corn Silage

Abnormality	Moisture	As % of Normal*
Predough Immature	80%	58%

Drouth (no ears)	60%	107%

* Normal would be well-eared 70% moisture corn silage with 72% TDN on a dry-matter basis.

That gives you an idea of what corn silage is worth as a feed out of a silo. But what if you are purchasing a field of standing corn? Following are several factors you could consider:

1. What does it cost to harvest the silage?
2. What is the moisture level of the corn? (See Table #1)
3. How well eared is the corn? (See Table #2).
4. How mature is it? (See Table #2).
5. How far must it be hauled (at 25 to 50 cents/T per mile)?

See Local ASCS For Dairy Refund

TOWANDA (Bradford Co.)—Dairy farmers are paying an assessment of five cents per hundredweight of milk sold in 1991 as part of the Budget Deficit Reduction Act. Some farmers can take back their money.

According to Lehan Power, Penn State University farm management agent, all dairy farmers have the opportunity to obtain a refund of that assessment if they meet the following criteria: They do not market more milk in 1991 than they did in 1990; they have a conservation plan on file with their local ASCS office.

Power reminded farmers to apply for their refund at their local ASCS office.

In the average case, the refund will not be large. A 60-cow herd with a 15,000 pound average will have paid $450 in assessments.

However, if the dairy farm is likely to produce only slightly more than its 1990 production level, it may pay to reduce the amount of milk sold through early drying off of cows, early culling, putting the milk to other uses, or even milk dumping.

The following worksheet can be used to guide the farmer's calculations. The potential refund is entered on line A. This should not be greater than five cents times the total hundredweights of milk sold in 1990.

Any added benefits from a reduction in production, or the value of on-farm uses for milk produced but not shipped, are entered on line B (e.g., reduction in costs from the early culling of a cow, or savings on purchases of milk replacer).

Lines A and B are added and entered on line C. The expected net milk price is entered on line D (this price is net of any and all marketing and handling charges and assessments, and should include any premiums normally received by the farmers).

Estimates of average local net milk prices for November and December are presented. The amount that milk marketings can profitably be reduced is calculated by dividing line C by line D.

In the example, the dairy farmer could reduce 1991 milk marketings by up to 37 hundredweights so as to be eligible for a refund. This is about 1.5 days production on the 60-cow, 15,000 pound average Pennsylvania farm referred to above.

Dairy Division Hosts Annual Meeting

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — Dairy producers in Federal Order 4 could be adversely affected by the recent defeat of an over-order pricing mechanism in New York State, according to dairy cooperative manager Boyd Cook.

"It is a sad state of affairs when farmers fail to cooperate because of the desire to receive a few cents more than their neighbor, rather than joining together and receiving dollar benefits for everyone," said Boyd Cook, manager of the Middle Atlantic Division of Dairymen, Inc.

Cook elaborated on the pricing problem in his report to members attending the division's annual meeting, held last week at the York Holiday Inn.

"It was depressing to see New York dairy farmers, for some unknown reason, fail to continue the emergency premium pricing under the Rogers-Allen Act. For once, they had a pricing mechanism that would add dollars to producer milk checks and establish a level playing field for processors," Cook said.

He speculated that processor pressure on non-coop members, with promises of a few cents more than neighbors' prices, resulted in the defeat of the premium-pricing program. As a result, premiums in that market are dropping rapidly and could have a negative impact on over-order premiums in neighboring market orders, if excess milk spills over to depress farm-milk prices in adjoining markets.

The Dairymen manager reported that nearly 50 cents per hundredweight has been added this past year to producer milk checks in Federal Order 4, because of the coordinated efforts of the Middle Atlantic Cooperative Milk Marketing Agency (MACMMA). MACMMA members include the Dairymen division, Atlantic Dairy Cooperative, and Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative.

The cooperative's own incentive programs further added to the combined average of 71 cents per hundredweight to Middle Atlantic division's member pay price over the last 12 months. More than $3 million total was added to member milkchecks through the market premiums, quality premiums, volume production incentives, and fall production incentives.

With FDA intensifying testing for drug residues in the nation's milk supply, Cook advised Dairymen members to meet with their veterinarians to review recommendations for use, storage, and control of animal drugs on their farms. While recent U.S. Public Health requirements mandate every-load testing for residues, Cook noted that Dairymen has already been operating under a similar residue testing program for several years.

Both Cook and division president Fred Butler reviewed the flurry of dairy-oriented legislation under discussion in both houses of Congress. Proposals include increased support prices, diversion programs, budget and dairy program assessments, recourse loans for processors and farmers.

"Dairy farmers and agriculture will not get much help, if any, from Washington, D.C.," said Butler, of Inwood, W.Va. "Maybe a dollar increase in price support, which would help our pay price next spring."

Dairymen regional manager David Jones said the best solution for the depressed financial picture for dairy farmers is through working cooperatively, rather than alone. He suggested common marketing agencies, such as the MACMMA group in Federal Order 4, as a proven way to raise farm milk prices. Jones added that farmers must also continue to be actively involved in legislative efforts to work toward long-range dairy price solutions.

Internal restructuring aimed at cost-cutting is another area of challenge to dairy cooperatives. Jones cited the recent sale of Dairymen's UHT milk processing plant and corporate restructuring as cost-cutting measures undertaken by the 4,000-plus member, Louisville, Ky.-based cooperative.

Director Myron Wilhide, Detour, Md., briefed members on the division laboratory's quality testing procedures. Wilhide, who chairs the quality control committee, reviewed the stringent testing criteria, licensing of staff, and certification procedures for accuracy. He reminded members also of the seriousness of antibiotic residues in milk.

"Remember, under the new rules starting January 1, 1992, three drug violations and you'll be out of business," Wilhide said.

Baltimore County members Cletus and Austin Armacost, Armacost Farms, Inc., were honored for 50 years of continuous membership with Dairymen and the division's predecessor Maryland Cooperative Milk Producers.

Ten member farms received 25-year membership awards. Quarter-century honors went to Ronald and Carl Allison, Leroy and Joyce Bupp, Claude and Kevin Cooper, Marshall Edwards, Robert Gross, H. Bailey and Darwin Herring, Herring Farms, Frances, Ronald, Donald and Terry Hunsecker, Hunsecker Farms, Norman and Grace Kennedy, and Robert Mays.

Five directors were ratified for three-year terms on the Middle Atlantic Division's board of directors. Re-elected in their respective districts were Gary R. Brauning, Finksburg, Maryland, representing District 3, Fred G. Butler, Inwood, West Virginia, representing District 10, Claude Cooper, New Freedom, Pennsylvania, representing District 7, Paul A. Crowl, Street, Maryland, representing District 1, and Harold H. Martin, Oxford, Pennsylvania, representing District 14.

Frey & Sons Registers In Angus Program

ST. JOSEPH, Mo. — Emerson Frey & Sons, Washington Boro, Pennsylvania, have recently been enrolled in the Angus Herd Improvement Records program of the American Angus Association, reports Richard L. "Dick" Spader, executive vice-president of the national breed registry organization in St. Joseph, Missouri.

Angus Herd Improvement Records (AHIR) is a comprehensive evaluation program used by registered Angus breeders to help them keep records of reproduction, and growth rate on individual animals. Each year hundreds of Angus breeders use AHIR records to produce more profitable, efficient Angus seedstock.

By weighing calves at 205 days of age and again at a year of age, breeders not only identify the cattle that grow the fastest and most efficiently, they also identify cows that regularly produce above average calves, and bulls that sire outstanding calves.

The American Angus Association in 1957 was the first beef breed organization to offer its members a production records program. Since that date, the AHIR program has grown to the point that breeders report more than 300,000 birth, weaning, and yearling weights each year. This mountain of information is processed by the Association's modern computerized data processing systems.

Milk Price Fragments Industry

Fluctuations in milk prices and the instability it creates for dairy producers has caused a number of dairymen to come up with their own concepts for creating stability.

Disagreement over policy, plans and direction has polarized some dairy industry people. There are those who have formed new organizations, or changed alliances.

Ralph Kraeger, of Remen, N.Y., is a dairy farmer with 30 grade Holsteins on a 150-acre farm. He is a member of Dairylea Cooperative Inc., one of the cooperatives to issue a block vote against continuing the Rogers-Allen Act.

Kraeger said he didn't agree with the vote and didn't think the block vote represented a consensus of cooperative members.

However, Dairylea officials don't necessarily agree that the representation was in error. But they also are not critical of Kraeger's efforts to improve communications within the industry. They question the need.

While Kraeger isn't starting his own alternative to Dairylea, he said he thinks there is a better way for rank-and-file milk producers to inform all their representatives — elected and hired — of the opinions of the majority of grass roots farmers.

According to the dairyman, he and several milk producers in his area started a communications service called the "Dairyman's Voice Lobbying Poll."

Kraeger is not trying to start a new organization within Dairylea. Rather, he said, he is starting a service that will make it easier for dairymen to be heard.

The service is a monthly mailbox survey for subscribers only. The cost is $24 a year.

According to Kraeger, he will mail out survey forms which have constantly changing topics, with much of the form devoted to "yes" or "no" votes.

There is also a space on the form requesting input from subscribers as to what issues should be considered for the next month.

The tallies would be compiled and the results used as representative of those who subscribe. Kraeger said the results would be set as direction for lobbying efforts at both the state and federal level.

"The purpose of the New York, New England and Pennsylvania Dairyman's Voice Lobbying Poll is to create a powerful lobby which represents entirely dairy farmers' interests much the same as Florida Orange Growers Association and Beef Cattlemen's Association are represented.

"Non voting on a topic will not be used as a 'no' vote. Vote number results only will determine representation on each issue," he said, in obvious reference to the voting policy which was used for the Rogers-Allen referendum in which those who did not vote, or did not fill out referendum forms properly were counted as "no" votes.

According to Kraeger, the purpose of the poll is not to create a profitable business, although it is listed as a for-profit organization. He said the need for the lobbying poll couldn't wait the weeks it would take for the postmaster to decide if it would be considered a nonprofit organization in order to benefit from reduced postage rates. The subscription price of the service is to cover mailing, processing and lobbying costs.

He said he would like to see all 22,000 Northeast dairymen become involved.

According to Kraeger, most of the dairymen in organizations to which he belongs do not have an opportunity to attend regular meetings.

Kraeger's observation that most organizations fail in assessing the true majority opinion is supported somewhat through the historic workings of almost every civic and business organization, including other dairy cooperatives and industry organizations. Meetings and hearings do not attract anywhere near 100 percent participation.

Kraeger said he thinks having a ballot arrive at a farmer's house during the first 10 days of each month and having the return postage and address already on the form will allow the farmer the convenience to sit down at the kitchen table when he has time and jot down his opinion.

"I am a Dairylea member and I'm a little upset that Dairylea voted down (Rogers-Allen). They did not ask me how I wanted to vote. This is why I want farmers to have input. This would only assist the process," he said.

"In the long range, it allows us to address a full range of topics that affect the dairy farmer. This is a way for those farmers to get together and make those decisions.

"Only 10 percent of 22,000 voice an opinion. We want to allow 90 to 100 percent to be able to participate," he said, though his figures were created.

Officials at Dairylea did not dispute Kraeger's dissatisfaction with the voting, nor with the call for improved communications within an organization.

However, the cooperative's chief executive officer said best efforts were made to inform the members and that an existing 24-hour system allows for members' opinions to be expressed, and at no direct cost to the member.

Rick Smith, chief executive officer, said that all groups and organizations of people could use better systems of communications. He said it's something that should always draw attention for improvement.

As for Dairylea, he said that while the existing system isn't perfect, "We do a better job than we did 20 years ago."

According to Smith, Dairylea members receive several publications including a monthly newsletter that accompanies the milk check which contains articles about cooperative issues and opinions. Also the cooperative has a toll-free number for members to use to discuss any subject.

"I wouldn't want to say anthing anti about what (Kraeger) is doing, but, in my mind, with the 800 number, at some point there's not a lot more you could do.

"Having said that, if a member out there is frustrated, I admire him for trying to make a difference. I think there is a lot of frustration out there."

Smith went on to discuss his perception of the need for communications.

"In terms of quality communcication for our industry and organization, anything designed to improve communication is hard to be critical of.

"My feelings on this is, having accurate information in a timely way and communicating well is something we all have to do a better job at.

"In many respects, the industry is a very simple one, and in other respects it's very complicated. (The effectiveness of communications) is a fair issue to raise.

"How do you communicate better? All the issues we got — dairy policy, environmental, etc. — how do you break complex issues down into information for all people so you can have quality dialogue," he said.

Smith said that, with most topics, not all information can or should be included in the same message. Especially with a complex issue, details and relevant specifics are provided after the overall gist of an issue is understood by the members.

He said that attempting to convey any information about any topic requires some compromise of the completeness of information provided in any one message.

Furthermore, Smith said he doesn't think it's possible for members to know, or even that they want to know, all the details of every issue or topic — that's why they have a full time staff, so there is someone who has time to deal with the detail.

He said that, especially in the cooperative, there is an understanding that the best interests of the members are being represented at all times. "There are many situations during the course of the year where we vote for our members on a given issue."

Also, while he said there should always be strong efforts made to constantly improve communications, Dairylea management does get information out.

"We communicate with our members at least twice a month, through different forms, on policies and governmental issues. And that pattern was followed in the month leading up to the second of the Rogers-Allen," Smith said, adding that the cooperative even went a little further and put out a special edition just for the Rogers-Allen vote.

"We had special communications specifically on Rogers-Allen, talking about issues and pluses and minuses. The nature of those communications is such that, if they have a concern, or opinion, (the members should) call us."

He said that this system of information exchange "... would happen and did happen with the Rogers-Allen."

However, Smith said that the cooperative doesn't take a raw majority vote on issues, but operates through member representation.

"It's impossible for individiual members to have, on a daily basis, the complete information, the ins and outs on various issues.

"They want representation. From a membership standpoint, what I think the concern would be is ... did the member have an opportunity to express concerns. There's an understanding that we will do things in the members best interest."

As far as the Rogers-Allen block vote, Smith said it's unfortunate that the rules concerning voting were such that Kraeger or others couldn't keep their own votes separate from the block vote. "In federal marketing orders, a member can opt out (of the block vote.) Under New York law, that was not available to members for Rogers-Allen."

Safe Water Clinic Set

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Concerned about the quality of your drinking water? If you depend on your own well or spring, you should be. "The quality of water from a private supply is the responsibility of its owner," says Dr. William Sharpe, water resource specialist at Penn State University. "If you don't test your water, no one else will."

Persons whose water supply is from a private well should plan to attend a free "Safe Drinking Water Clinic" sponsored by Penn State Extension on November 19 from 1 to 3 p.m. and repeated from 7 to 9 p.m.

The afternoon session will be held in the basement meeting room of the Farm and Home Center, 1383 Arcadia Road, Lancaster. The evening session will be held at Yoder's Restaurant, 14 S. Tower Road, New Holland. Water quality experts from Penn State will speak on water quality issues in Lancaster County, drinking water quality problems, ground water quality, proper well construction, water testing and interpretation of water test results, and water treatment for private water systems.

Representatives of water treatment companies will be on hand, and if you bring a water sample you can arrange to have your water tested by American Testing Laboratories at a reduced rate. For more information contact the Lancaster County Cooperative Extension office at 394-6851. You can pick up a water sample kit and instructions at the Lancaster County Extension Office or at American Testing Laboratories, 784 Flory Mill Road, Lancaster (569-0488).

FOCUS

Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association

Pennsylvania DHIA news is presented in FOCUS each week in cooperation with Dixie L. Burris, manager of membership development.

For more information about these news items or the services of DHIA call 1-800-DHI-TEST. The call is free.

DICK BARTH
General Manager
Pennsylvania DHIA

In my last column, I briefly described what reorganization of the DHIA system in Pennsylvania is all about and described 10 major problems that the federated system creates for DHIA members.

Let's look at the first of those problems in detail, member service rates.

The state board adopted a policy in 1988 to set state association service rates based on the cost to provide them, plus a small margin, which is usually between 3- and 10-percent of the cost. On average, about 40 percent of a members total cost for DHIA services comes from the state association. The balance, or 60 percent, goes to the county associations for the field services they provide.

Examine the rates in many counties and you will find that their rates for owner-sampler and AM-PM herds are actually subsidizing the cost of 2X programs. The 2X programs require two sueprvisor trips to the farm each month, rather than one.

As a rule of thumb, if field services rates are set to cover the actual cost of providing 2X service, then AM-PM should cost about 70 percent of the cost for 2X and owner-sampler should cost about 50 percent.

We frequently find that AM-PM services cost more than 90 percent of a 2X program and owner-sampler between 80 percent and 90 percent.

In these situations, if AM-PM and owner-sampler services are even used, they are subsidizing the true cost of DHIA and DHIR records services.

The practical problem created by this type of practice is significant. Currently, about 40 percent of all herds in the state are on an AM-PM program. If that participation could be doubled to 80 percent, members would be able to save $1,000,000 per year in on-farm supervisor costs.

But, as long as local service rates for AM-PM remain unjustifiably high, there will be no financial incentive for members to switch to AM-PM and the opportunity to reduce costs is lost.

Each year we lose dairy producers in Pennsylvania. About half of those are DHIA members. As the pool of eligible members continues to shrink, we must be able to provide attractive services to more producers or membership will shrink as well.

Discrimination resulting from the sacred pricing practices that are the historical precedent at the local level are a major obstacle to membership growth.

Many would rate the process of setting local rates very poorly. Ultimately the loss of members will show how poorly.

How will reorganization solve the problem? By merging all local associations into a single direct member organization, all service rate will be set by the state board using the policy of rates being set based on the cost to provide them, plus a small margin.

The state association will treat all service programs that way, not just a few that it might favor. This practice will assure that equity exists between member service programs across the state.

Does this mean that the cost of records services will go up for you? In some locations, where there are unfair rates now, perhaps.

Otherwise, there may be no need to change the rates just because of reorganization. Since each county association is different from all the rest, we won't really be able to answer the question until your own county's situation is looked at. And that schedule is up to your local board.

Next time, we'll look at problem No. 2, waiting lists for services.

ARIS QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ARIS allows dairymen and their authorized veterinarians and nutritional consultants to access individual DHIA herd records from a personal computer to the main computer in State College. Call the State DHIA office number listed in the FOCUS column head to learn more about how you can use this unique DHIA service to increase the profitability of your herd and the DHIA records you produce.

Q: I am currently an ARIS user and would like some additional training. Is this possible?

A: Yes. We will be conducting ARIS workshops this winter for users at all levels of proficiency. The workshops will be held at the DHIA Service Center in State College. If you would like to attend a workshop, please call us to register as soon as possible.

Farm Credit Bankers Have Long Been Recognized For Achievements In The Field.

Farm Credit bankers possess their share of prestigious achievement awards. But more often than not, the awards they're most proud of are the ones they've earned in, say, conservation, dairy, or veterinary science.

Not many bankers can say that.

That's because most Farm Credit loan officers were born and raised on farms. They grew up active in 4-H and FFA. Many even got their college degrees from ag schools.

What's more, every one of our loan officers goes through the toughest ag lending training program in America.

And because our loan officers understand farming as well as financing, they're not only smarter. They're faster. In fact, they have the power of loan approval equal to most bank presidents.

So stop by soon and talk with your nearby Farm Credit loan officer. Because whenever you need some extra help in your field, you'll want to work with the banker most accomplished in his.

Warren Co. 4-H Dairy In National Competition

WARREN (Warren Co.) — The dairy judging program is more than knowing a quality dairy animal, said Phyllis Wright, county extension agent.

It also includes developing presentation, reasoning and concentration skills.

Four Warren County 4-H'ers have earned the honor to participate in the North American Invitational Dairy Judging Contest in Louisville, Kentucky, this weekend. They will be the only Pennsylvania dairy team in this national competition.

Ron Riedel, 1991 graduate of Corry High School, has been in training for eight-years and is an 11th year 4-H Western Dairy Club member. He plans a career in dairy work. Belmer Hitchcock is a senior at Eisenhower School, a 10-year member in Keystone Connection Dairy Club, and has trained for five years. Tom Brown is a junior at Eisenhower and an 8-year member of Western 4-H Dairy Club, with six years of training. Tim Ludwick is a freshman at Virginia Tech majoring in dairy science. He has had eight years of training and is a 10-year member of Eastern Dairy Club.

Coaches Dean and Melinda Johnson of Warren state said, "These experiences help teens to develop excellent concentration, discipline, and public speaking abilities." Using standards set by Pure Bred Dairy Cattle Association's score card, the individuals must study the classes of animals with four animals per class for 12 minutes.

During competition, eight minutes more is given for individuals to prepare reasons for placing the animals. After judging 10 classes with 40 animals to remember, individuals must professionally address judges with their reasons for animal placings in three of the classes, with a minimum of two reasons for each class. Judges then score individuals and teams on their knowledge of animal conformation and presentation skills. Those scores determine winners to participate at various levels of competition.

The Johnsons have worked with 60 teens over the past eight years using slides, actual animals, and other education materials. Each year the outstanding teens travel in Pennsylvania and surrounding states to practice judging at Northwestern Pennsylvania Dairy Judging Contest, competition at Penn State Dairy Club Contest, 4-H State Achievement Days, the Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Judging School, and Pennsylvania All-American Dairy Show at Farm Show Building in Harrisburg.

The team members have travelled to Ashtabula Ag Days in Ohio and several fairs in nearby states. They spend 3-4 hours three times a month practicing their judging, reasoning, and presentation skills, and approximately twice weekly as competition time gets close.

Support for this program is found with many dairy farmers allowing teams to work with their animals. Travel expenses for this national competition is provided by groups such as Pennsylvania Friends of 4-H, Warren County Holstein Club, and anonymous donors.

The Johnsons' comment on the change in young people as they work with many teens. The travel experience and contacts with new people broaden the teens scope of thinking. The discipline for public speaking and "thinking on your feet" provides good self-esteem to cope with many of life's situations. The experiences also help them to decide on careers they can pursue.

Both Dean and Melinda Johnson participated in 4-H contests when they were 4-H'ers and in dairy cattle judging teams at Alfred State College and Virginia Tech, respectfully. Both are graduates of Virginia Tech. Currently, as certified dairy judges, they judge two or more shows yearly in Pennsylvania and surrounding states.

Video presentation by the Ohio State Cooperative Extension Service to discuss the issue of food quality in America.

A nationally prominent keynote speaker will lead off the afternoon program.

Then, Jim Kinsella, manager of the BASF Agronomic Development Center at Lexington, Ill., will make a presentation on "The Long-Term Benefits of Conservation Tillage."

The afternoon program will close with a repeat of the morning breakout sessions, giving individuals an opportunity to hear speakers in two of the four topic areas.

Tickets for the noon lunch are available at $5 each from county offices of the Cooperative Extension Service throughout the Mid-Atlantic area. They must be purchased in advance — and not later than Dec. 5.

Chairing the planning committee for this year's Mid-Atlantic Conservation Tillage Conference is David A. Martin, an agricultural agent in Anne Arundel County for the Cooperative Extension Service, Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources. MIANR is one of three research and public service institutions of the University of Maryland System.

The vice chairman is Paul H. Craig, an agricultural agent in Dauphin County, Pa., for the Penn State Extension Service.

Are Producer Financed Milk Promotions Necessary?

Editor's Note: In the fourth part of a series of investigative reports on milk pricing and the dairy industry, Staffer Vernon Achenbach Jr. looks at the necessity of producer-financed milk promotions.

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — With on-farm milk prices allowing an at best marginal profit for dairymen, many producers are questioning some of the large deductions from their milk checks.

Such as the deductions for generic dairy promotion.

All dairy producers give up 15 cents for every hundred pounds of milk they sell to finance a huge milk marketing campaign, both nationally, regionally and locally.

Those producers who fall under United Dairy Industry Association (UDIA) contribute more than $90 million a year to bankroll a promotion industry that attempts to get more people to consume more milk.

Some of the funds are used for research. The bulk is used for administration and advertising, with each promotion organization creating its own spending plan.

Typically, however, many dollars are used to pay for office space, materials, postage, and travel costs, salaries and benefits for public relations people and marketing professionals who set up advertising campaigns and promotion activities designed to entice people to consume more milk and dairy products.

A good portion of the money is spent on marketing and planning and goes to newspapers, and radio and television networks and stations, for advertising.

The benefit of such advertising is impossible to discern with any accuracy.

Research from Cornell University, Ithaca, N.Y., suggests that the money spent for generic dairy marketing, nationally and locally, could be nothing more than a waste of farmers' money.

The data and opinion offered in an article in "Dairy Marketing Notes," (1991 No. 1) authored by Richard Aplin, a professor in the agricultural economics department at Cornell, states that overall consumption of fluid milk has not changed significantly since 1972. It has remained stable at around 51 billion pounds.

However, the type of milk purchased by consumers has changed. The amount of whole milk (3.5 percent fat) sold has dropped significantly over the past years. Consumers did not stop buying, however, they switched to purchasing low fat (2 percent fat) milk and skim milk.

In the article, Aplin states, "Overall milk sales have shown no growth during the past three decades. The lack of any substantial growth in overall milk sales tends to increase competitive pressures in the marketplace."

In other words, Alpin said that because milk demand is stable, producers, dealers and retailers will be more likely to operate with a reduced profit margin in order to keep business steady.

But, according to Alpin, it's producers who are feeling the competition most.

A couple of factors have led to this.

Milk is considered a generic commodity and consumers and dealers and retailers don't really have to care who is behind the manufacture of the raw product. If one goes bankrupt, another will pick up the production and sell the milk at the same price the former supplier would have.

And dealers and retailers have dwindled in number, the result of large companies buying out the smaller businesses and gaining control of large areas. Not only in retail, but some retail companies have also taken over dealerships.

The 15 cents-per-hundredweight deduction for dairy promotion adds overhead costs to the most competitive group in the dairy industry.

In Pennsylvania, the average dairy farm in 1990 had 61.5 cows and produced 16,846 pounds of 3.68-percent fat milk each. That farmer would have 10,360 hundredweights (cwt.) of milk to sell for the year.

At 15 cents per hundredweight, the average dairyman in Pennsylvania may pay along the order of $1,554 a year for advertising.

The price of milk paid to a farmer is based on the standard of 3.5 percent fat in the milk. But without going into that much detail, if this farmer made a year-average price of $13.11 per cwt. (the September 1991 blend price in the Mid-Atlantic federal order) his total gross income on the farm for milk sales would be approximately $136,000.

When production costs (feed, fuel, etc.) are deducted, there isn't a lot of income remaining to pay for long term loans, insurance premiums, etc.

Furthermore, when the price of milk is high to the farmer, which is equated to strong demand, the farmer pays less of a percentage of his gross income to promote the retail sale of milk.

When the on-farm price of milk is low, he pay more of his total income.

Depending on the price per hundredweight, which varies from month to month and from dairyman to dairyman, the 15 cents can range from a very small percent to almost as high as 2 percent. At $13.11 per hundredweight, the 15 cents represents 1.2 percent of the money the farmer gets paid.

But while researchers at Cornell and elsewhere have data which shows no change in total demand of milk during the past couple decades, other groups show declines.

The 1991 "Milkfacts," booklet is published by the Milk Industry Foundation, Washington, D.C., a group which describes itself as " . . . the national trade association for processors of fluid milk and milk products. MIF is one of the four constituent organizations of the International Dairy Foods Association."

Dairy Of Distinction Farm

eggs in one basket," said Robert R. Gehman.

Gehman said he believes that, sometimes, "when hog prices are high and milk prices drop off, we're not hurting that much," he said.

The farm owes much of its success to hard, persistent work — and credit from the Lord, said Adeline. "If the farmer does't get the rain and the sun, your work does no good. It's the Lord that gives you the increase."

Robert Gehman worked on a dairy and beef operation when in high school. It was his experience working for his uncles on their dairy farms that helped him start his own dairy business. In addition, Adeline grew up on a dairy farm (50 acres, 12 cows) in Dublin, Pa., near Doylestown.

Comprises 160 acres

The Marwell Dairy comprises about 160 acres (about 110 tillable). They also farm an additional 900 acres with cash crops in various locations nearby.

The dairy has 80 milk cows (most grade Holstein) and about 70 young stock. Milking times are 5:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., from a tiestall to a milking pipeline.

Gehman uses a total mixed rations (TMR) system formulated by F.M. Brown.

The DHIA herd average is 17,600 pounds of milk; 675 pounds of fat; and 578 pounds of protein.

Raises hogs

The farm also raises about 1,100 hogs a year. They are sold locally through Leidy's Meats. The swine are obtained from a local farrowing house with 60 head.

They also raise 800 capons for retail and wholesale markets.

The Gehmans also raise about 60 acres of gourds and about 15 acres of spaghetti, butternut, and acorn squash, in addition to 115 acres of ornamental pumpkins. (The pumpkins are maintained — planted, cultivated, and fertilized — for Dan Shantz, a wholesaler. Shantz then harvests them when they are ripe.)

Gehman said the family also maintains an 80-acre field for the St. Francis Academy, a Catholic organization in Bethlehem, and helps harvest a peach orchard and a vineyard.

Lot of farmers

"On my mother's side, there are a lot of farmers," said Gehman. "And I just always wanted to farm. I can't see people who go to college and don't know what they want to do! I knew what I wanted to do when I was 10 years old."

Gehman said that he knew if he wanted to be a dairy farmer, he needed some "first-hand experience.

"I mean, I took the ag course in school, you didn't learn a whole lot. You got some book knowledge but not that much hands-on experience," he said.

Gehman said, in those days, it was a lot harder to farm. "Those were the days before stable cleaners and silo unloaders," he said. "And I started a quarter after four in the morning and worked till 6-6:30 at night with about a 15-minute break for breakfast and, at most, a half-hour break for lunch. And that was six days a week." Every third Sunday he would have off in the afternoon, but would have to work every Sunday morning.

Combined knowledge

But the combined knowledge and experience of keeping a farm helped in obtaining Dairy of Distinction recognition.

"Our farm sits back from the road," said Adeline. "But we try to keep the grass mowed on either side of the macadam lane.

"What happens on a farm is you tend to not have time to take care of it. It can be very easily neglected," she said.

Adeline said that Robert "is of the calibre that it's not fun working on a run-down place. It's no fun farming it. Some farms never take time for painting buildings or putting in windows."

Appearance up

According to Adeline, the general appearance has been kept up outside the farm as well as in.

"I like to say one thing about my husband, which I think a lot of farmers can learn," she said. "He always bought things for the house, not only for the farm. He will always buy a refrigerator or something before I even ask for it. A lot of farmers don't spend money for anything that's in the house, because everything has to go into the farm. And that makes dairy farming a lot more fun."

Adeline said that the family cares about the appearance of the farm. "Not just making a living," she said. "It's no fun living in a run-down place. We know some farmers who never take time to clean up junk or anything. And there's no joy in farming that way.

"This earth is God's. You should take the best care of it you can."

Pro Ag Supports Dairy Bill

MESHOPPEN (Wyoming Co.)— William Dagostin, chairman of the Progressive Agriculture Organization (Pro Ag) steering committee recently announced that Pro Ag is endorsing the dairy act that has been reported out of the U.S. Senate Ag Committee.

Dagostin, a dairy farmer from Barwick, said, "Pro Ag has endorsed the act, providing the support price on dairy products is not reduced below the $11.10 (cwt) level contained in the dairy act."

Arden Tewksbury, manager of Pro Ag said, "Our organization has not given up on efforts to obtain a permanent two-tier pricing program, but it has become obvious to us that a two-tier program is not going to pass this year." Therefore, after Pro Ag's steering committee considered all the problems facing dairy farmers, they decided to support the Senate bill, he said.

Tewksbury said, "The bill is geared to raise the support price on manufactured milk from $10.10 per cwt to $11.10. Also the proposed bill calls for the secretary of agriculture to implement a voluntary diversion program if the secretary estimates the Commodity Credit Corporation will purchase over 4½ billion pounds of milk equivalent in dairy products in any calendar year."

The proposed bill exempts dairy farmers from any cost of the program providing they don't exceed their milk production of the preceding year. Any dairy farmer who signs an agreement to produce less milk than the preceding year will be paid a set amount for the reduced production.

Any dairy farmer who does not participate in the program will be able to produce milk at free will, but they will bear the cost of the program.

Sinan's Holsteins Sweep State Production Records

RANDY WELLS
Indiana Co. Correspondent

HOME (Indiana Co.) — Nearly 15 years ago while traveling his milk-hauling route, one of Milos Sinan's customers expressed an interest to get out of the dairy business, and offered to sell Sinan his herd of 30 cows on a monthly payment plan.

Sinan agreed, and added the cows to his own small herd of calves.

Last week the Sinan family learned their Holsteins — now nearly 250 animals — was the top DHIA herd in the state for milk production, butterfat, and protein production. And not only is the Sinan family farm producing some of the best milk in Pennsylvania, it is still actively involved in delivering it to market.

At the Sinan's northern Indiana County farm, a constant wind blows across a half-mile long field and a pond speckled with migrating wild geese before it reaches the complex of neat white barns, silos, and outbuildings.

Commitment has played a major role in boosting the Sinan herd to the top of the DHIA chart: a commitment of time by all five members of the family to work long days and milk three shifts to increase production; a commitment of money to reinvest in the farm's improvement and modernization; and a commitment of caring for the extra comfort of the cows.

Mornings at the Sinan farm begin about 3:30 with Milos, wife Sandy, and daughter Marlane, 20 milking the string of approximately 75 Holsteins. A short time later, sons Mevlan, 23, and Milos, Jr., 21, pull out with two of the family's milk tank trucks to start 11-hour days of hauling milk from 45 farms in Indiana, Armstrong, and Westmoreland counties to Turner Dairy in Penn Hills.

With Milos often spending much of the day in the tractor seat on the farm's 160 acres of corn and 150 acres of alfalfa, Sandy and Marlane handle the 11:30 a.m. milking, and the boys return home in time to help with the chores and the 6:30 p.m. milking.

A grinding schedule, to be sure. But it has paid off.

In the recently-announced year-end DHIA standings, the Sinan's 81.1 cow herd produced an average of 28,331 pounds of milk, 1,075 pounds of butterfat, and 875 pounds of protein, first place in all three rolling herd categories. Those figures represent better than 9 percent increases in each category over the previous year.

"It was a lot of work, but well worth the effort," Milos said.

As the end of the DHIA year approached, Milos said he knew his herd was going to finish near the top.

But then he adds the family is too busy to be overly preoccupied with watching statistics.

When asked if diet or genetics plays the most important role in his cows' record-setting performance, Milos said, "Everything combined," including "tender loving care."

"But they're really not pampered," he said. "They're just taken care of."

A veterinarian visits the farm twice a month for "herd health," a sort of preventative health care program where cows are randomly examined with special emphasis on pregnancy testing. A hoof trimmer also visits about three times a year.

The silage is evaluated at least monthly, and a lot of weight is placed on recommendations for ration mixture variations made by Vigortone representative Jim Rengert in Maryland.

"We think he's super," Milos said.

The Sinan's herd was already producing 23,000 pounds of milk when the decision was made to start milking three times a day.

"We saw our cows leaking milk," Milos said. He believes the three-a-day milkings improve overall production, butterfat, and protein production.

"I think it's better for the cows. Some vets will tell you that," he said. "It relieves stress on the cows."

But admittedly it causes some additional stress on the people who have to do the milking.

"Somebody's in the barn here all the time," Milos said. "We're fortunate we have good family help."

Like dairymen all across the state, the Sinan's in the past year have had to adjust to fluctuating prices for their milk. In their case prices have ranged from more than $16 per CTW to more than $11 per CTW. He expects the price of milk will continue to go up and down for some time to come.

"Something has to be done to level out the price," he said.

And like most other dairymen, they must cope with being a business which cannot set the price for the product they produce.

"Everything we buy we buy retail," he said. "And everything we sell we sell wholesale."

In spite of price uncertainties, the physical layout of the Sinan farm has undergone several improvements in recent years.

Three silos have been added since Milos and Sandy moved there 15 years ago. A new heifer barn, garage addition, and manure storage system are other recent improvements. A third line of tiestalls is being planned for the milking barn to add even more efficiency to the 70-minute milking times.

As for the future, Sandy said the operation may likely grow to 100 milking cows in a year or two, but then she and Milos add the decision to expand will also depend a great deal on the children, and how much time they want to devote to the farm.

Can the Sinan's herd continue to improve and stay at the top of the DHIA charts?

With a laugh Milos said that once anyone is at the top there's only one way to go from there. He also noted herds which have been at the top previously have often dropped several positions in following years.

The Sinan's will have to stay on guard not to become complacent with their accomplishments, he said.

"It's a challenge," Milos said, "We keep pushing . . . . We always will."

Mark Tracy, 4-H Club president and member of the senior divison of the 4-H Livestock Judging Team, presents his reasons to coach Chet Hughes, Lancaster livestock agent.

national title. Chet Hughes, Lancaster livestock agent, and Greg Musser, coach, have accompanied the 4-H'ers to Louisville for the event. The Lancaster team is comprised of Mark Tracy, 15, Elizabethtown; Peter Hoffines, 16, Marietta; Wendall Landis, 15, Manheim; and Dwain Livengood, 18, Lancaster.

The temperature began to fall as the team members headed inside, studying their notes and organizing their thoughts. During late in the afternoon of this practice session, the livestock team examined several classes of Santa Gertrudis cattle.

Team members also looked over a scorecard highlighting navel and sheath measurements of the cattle; they took more notes; and as the sun fell and temperatures sank, they were busy imprinting the classes in their mind in preparation for a test of their reasoning abilities before livestock coach Chet Hughes.

"I think the most difficult thing for the kids is to be able to see the animals and take the proper notes," said Hughes.

Remember placings

According to Hughes, the team is instructed to look for individual characteristics on the animals they judge, try to picture that animal in the mind, and remember the placings and the reasons behind the placings during the presentations.

At NAILE, each member of the team will judge 10 classes of any of various breeds of livestock. Each class is about 15 minutes long. They will judge each class by type with performance data. Afterward, they will present the reasons to a set of judges.

During their reasonings, team members will not be permitted to read from notes.

Every class is worth 50 points, and every set of reasons 50 points. Hughes said the judges are looking at accuracy of placings in the classes. Next, judges will be concerned about the reasonings — and the reasonings have to be accurate.

Placed logically

"The important thing is that you saw the animals and you placed them in the logical sense," he said.

As an example, if a member placed the last little heifer first, then try to make the heifer sound better to the judge than she was, the member could lose points if it was clear the heifer belonged in last place.

Some members will try to memorize their reasons. But when they give their reasons, and suddently draw a blank, the judges can deduct scoring points.

"What we try to teach our guys is that you learn to remember the class in your heads, instead of trying to memeorize your reason," he said. "You try to write things down, like the 'white-navel heifer,' and then you'll never forget. You visualize her in your mind, what she looks like. So when you're giving your reasons, you can recall what she looks like."

Lot of practice

"It takes an awful lot of practice to get to that point, where you can just stand up and talk about it," he said.

Although the number of classes doesn't exceed the eastern nationals, the competition, according to Hughes, will be "grueling."

"I've been to judging contests and it seems like it's a little more difficult," said Tracy. "Everybody's on top of every state, so it's a little more closer in competition."

The senior division team won the statewide contest in July this year at the state 4-H Days at Penn State. Tracy said that contest was easier and more clear-cut. But now, he is up against more stiff competition from states with a great deal of talent, and preparing for it has been arduous.

Expand knowledge

"The more I expand my knowledge of what I'm supposed to do, the more I know what I'm supposed to say," said Tracy. "You feel more confident, but still, you're more nervous of what's going to be coming up."

The group practiced at the farm of Jim Quanbeck, who operates a 43-acre cattle farm near Columbia. There, Quanbeck raises 17 head of purebred Santa Gertrudis, a cross between Shorthorns and Brahmans (13/16 Shorthorn/3/16 Brahman) first bred at the King Ranch in Kingsville Texas in 1942. The cattle are noted for their durability in hot or cold weather, fast gain, good health, and calving ease.

"It's a good meat animal," said Quanbeck.

Quanbeck explained to the members the breed history and importance of the cattle. "The animal is more suited to the environment in Texas," he told the group. "They have good heat tolerance, although they're also good in cold weather. They gain fast and they are quite easy calving."

Turn out good carcass

In addition, according to Quanbeck, the cattle turn out a select to a low-choice carcass. Quanbeck said he is only one of two breeders of Santa Gertrudis in the county.

"But we think we're positioned pretty good in today's market because of lot of people are look-

First Bison Auction Huge Success

MIDDLEBURG (Snyder Co.) — The first Pennsylvania Bison (Buffalo) Association Auction last Saturday was a huge success, according to the association.

"A good showing of interested buyers was expected, as well as some curious bystanders, but wall-to-wall people?" said Margery Kutney, association secretary.

Bidders from Pennsylvania, New York, Ohio Rhode Island, Virginia, Connecticut, Delaware and all over the East gathered for the gala event. The 22 animals were sold from $1,000 for calves to $2,400 for a 2-year-old bull.

According to Kutney, Don Keister, owner of Keister's Middleburg Auction Barn, said it was the largest attendance he has ever had at an auction.

People arriving early had time to look around at the Bison by going out the catwalk and looking down on the quiet pens of waiting Bison to be sold.

Some hungry people also had an opportunity to taste Bison barbeque on a roll-or-go into the restaurant and buy a Bison burger. Either way, both were sold out before the auction started at 1 p.m.

Some ceramic banks in the design of the old buffalo nickel were hand-painted and for sale. Also, there were packages of gingerbread cookies cut from a buffalo mold.

"They had eyes and horns of slivered almonds!" said Kutney. "You had to see it to believe it. Delicious too! Bison cookbooks were sold. You could buy frozen Bison patties, salami, and Bison jerky, too."

There was even a booth with information on embryo transplanting.

Brought into the ring two at a time for auction, the Bison were a little bewildered about being the center of attention, but well-behaved and the auction went off without a hitch, according to Kutney.

All parties, sellers and buyers alike, seemed pleased with the sale. Although more Bison were expected to be sold, some ranches still are not equipped with a chute and squeeze, equipment necessary for testing and resale of the big animals still new to the eastern population. Bison were taken off the extinction list some 25 years ago.

Pennsylvania Bison Association applications were available at the auction, and 1992 applications are being accepted now. Out-of-state people are invited to join. Those interested can contact the Pennsylvania Bison Association, R1, Box 46, Meshoppen, PA 18630, (717) 965-2237.

Livestock Team

ing for a lot leaner type of carcass," he said.

He also told the livestock team that they need to remember that, for every beef animal, there is a market, and the animal has a place in that market.

Four 1,300-pound heifers were brought out as a judging class. Beforehand, the team examined the performance data taken on the heifers, including birth, weaning weight, yearling weight, and maternal milk expected progeny differences (EPDs). Also, navel and sheath characteristics were taken into account. Spring heifer calves were also brought into the ring for judging. It was this material that the team used to prepare for the test of their reasoning that night.

Work on judging

Mark Tracy, a sophomore at Elizabethtown and a 4-H member for about eight years, said he needs to work on actual judging and is confident about his reasonings. Peter Hoffines, 16, an Elizabethtown sophomore and a 4-H member for seven years, believes he has to develop more length and description in the reasoning, but feels confident about his placings.

Wendall Landis, 15, a sophomore at Lancaster Mennonite High School, is a six-year 4-H member. He said he needs to develop more understanding of EPDs and use them more thoroughly in his reasonings.

Dwain Livengood, 18, a graduate of Faith Mennonite High School, has been involved in 4-H for nine years. He said he is trying to improve his accuracy after his placings and make sure the reasonings are more precise.

For Tracy, the practice session was more than just correctly placing animals and talking the talk.

"I'm hoping I can do good," he said. "You always try to talk and say you're going to do better. But it doesn't seem to help. It's more like you have to really want to do it. You just have to make sure you're doing what you're supposed to do."

Hay Day Will Be In Lancaster

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.)— Hay Day in Lancaster County is on November 26, when the 31st annual Forage Conference will take place at the Lancaster Host Conference Center. The one-day conference is sponsored by the Pennsylvania Forage and Grassland Council and Penn State.

This year's conference will explore the theme of "Forages: Changes and Challenges" as it relates to forage quality and nutrient management. "The conference is open to the public and should be informative to anyone who produces forage or has an interest in it," said Dr. Marvin Hall, a member of the conference planning committee and an assistant professor of agronomy in Penn State's College of Agriculture.

Speakers from Pennsylvania, New York, and Wisconsin will address a range of topics, including nutrient management legislation, alfalfa variety quality differences, and improved harvesting techniques. In addition, a producer panel will discuss how to prioritize spring field work and hay making activities. Pennsylvania business representatives also will be on hand to discuss producer concerns and answer questions on an informal basis.

At the beginning of the conference, participants will have the opportunity to judge bales of hay and rank them according to their quality. These placings will be compared with ones based on a Near Infrared Reflectance Spectroscopy (NIRS) analysis of the same bales. Results of this comparison will be available following the afternoon session.

"It's the first time we've done a judging exercise like this," said Hall. "We see it as a unique way to emphasize the importance of quality in forage production."

More information and registration forms can be obtained at county extension offices. Preregistration by November 15 is encouraged. The registration fee of $18, payable at the door for last-minute participants, covers lunch and all proceedings.

Producer Financed Milk Promotions

80 percent of the milk in the U.S. and Canada, serves as a lobbying force and also to do market research, industry training and education.

The booklet is used as a reference source for milk marketing and industry officials.

However, the facts it contains do not reflect well on the efforts of the producer-paid milk promotion efforts to gain any ground.

In the booklet is a chart of information compiled by the U.S. Department of Agriculture which shows, of all the money which Americans spend on food, there is a decline in the percentage that is spent on dairy products.

Also provided is a chart of USDA information which shows how much less time Americans have to work in order to buy certain dairy products.

According to the chart, in 1970, an average American working in manufacturing had to work 15.5 minutes to buy a pound of butter.

Today the same person, doing the same work, needs to put in only 11 minutes to buy a pound of butter.

Some have argued that cheaper priced foods increase consumption, and thus demand, but this information doesn't support that claim.

Also, another chart indicates that Americans have cut their milk drinking by almost 3 gallons a year, while doubling their soft drink consumption since 1970.

Which futher casts doubt on the effects of advertising in order to get people to drink milk.

However, the consensus among milk promotion people is that without the promotion efforts, dairy consumption could fall even more.

At least one dairyman has fowarded the idea that, instead of spending the promotion funds on advertising, the money ought to be used to purchase surplus milk.

The thinking is that two birds would be killed because there would no longer be a surplus of milk, and that the milk purchased could be given to the poor.

Also, one person currently employed in milk promotion, who for obvious reasons wished not to be identified, said that it's possible that promotion money is not necessarily spent to the best benefit of the producers. Especially with promotions which occur at gathering of dairy producers.

However, the promotion official said that the whole promotion effort should not be stopped, but that it needs to be relooked, and not treated with kid gloves.

New Hay And Grain Auction Set To Open In Western Pennsylvania

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — A new hay and grain auction has been organized to serve the southwestern Pennsylvania area.

The first auction is scheduled for 11 a.m. on Monday, Nov. 25, 1991 at the Westmoreland Fairgrounds near Greensburg, Westmoreland County. Additional auctions are planned for the second and fourth Mondays of each month year round.

According to Westmoreland County Extension agent Gary Sheppard, one of the auction's organizers, there are two main motivations behind the auction: There are no other hay and grain auctions nearby and no other auction in Pennsylvania emphasizes price based on nutritional value or "relative feed value."

"Farmers in this part of the state account for hundreds of millions of dollars in cash receipts for crops and livestock products and typically produce about 700 thousand tons of hay each year," said Sheppard. "Yet amazingly there are no hay and grain auctions within a hundred miles of Greensburg.

"There has been a demand for such a marketplace for years from both those with feed to sell and those who need it," he said. "Bringing them togehter now is made especially timely because of the drought."

Sheppard said he hopes the Nov. 25 auction is the first of many more to come — "The more solid local marketing outlets we have to rely on, the stronger we are," he said, "and the more likely we are to stay that way."

As for pricing based on relative feed value, Sheppard said, "It's high time we started judging hay for what's in it and what it can do, not for how green it is or how good it smells.

"I have to wonder why a shopper in a grocery store knows more about the nutritional value of a three dollar box of cereal than most farmers know about a four hundred dollar load of hay.

"Relative feed value (RFV) is a ranking system based on the combined values for energy and protein content. A value of '100' is meant to represent average hay. A value of '123' simply means that hay is better than average but not as good as hay with a value of '145'," he said.

"However, RFV is not to be confused with dollar value. If hay has a RFV value of '123', it is not worth $123 a ton. The actual price has and always will be determined by the market, but at the Southwest Pennsylvania Hay and Grain Auction we strongly encourage, and will probably eventually require, feed testing and advocate using relative feed value to determine price.

"Both the seller and buyer benefit — The seller most likely receives a premium for high quality and that in turn provides an incentive to produce high quality. The buyer knows he's getting and gest what he pays for.

"Quality hay is free of mold and high in energy, with an TDN (total digestible nutrient) content of sixty percent on a dry matter basis. If the energy content is high, then the protein content will be good also.

Sheppard said that "because feed quality has a direct effect on production and performance, sorting out the best feeding strategy should be a priority in all livestock operations.

"Whether a lactating cow, gestation ewe or retired schooling horse, the best, most economical use of a forage matches the needs of the livestock to the quality of the feed through feed testing and ration formulation," Sheppard said.

Organizers see the auction as an educational opportunity and have planned lectures and demonstrations. Experts such as extension personnel will be on hand to answer questions.

At the Dec. 9 auction, Penn State forage specialist Dr. Marvin Hall is to explain relative feed value. All loads of hay coming into that auction will be sampled and tested through Penn State's NIR (Near Infrared Reflectance) Forage Analysis van.

In addition, the NIR van will be available to test samples at the second Monday of each month's auction. The van is also equipped to formulate rations.

The Southwest Hay and Grain Auction will accept any size loads of hay, grain, ensilage, round bales, etc. Sales will be based on weight and weight slips are required. Terms are cash or bank letter of credit.

For more information, contact the Westmoreland County Extension Office at (412) 837-1402 or the extension office in your area.

About Food Pricing Policies

Food shoppers question at times why the exact same product sells for different prices in the same market area. They ask who controls prices? No one in government or industry dictates retail food prices. Retailers establish pricing formulas that cover their costs, hopefully produce a profit, and still attract customers.

If supermarket management sets prices higher than their competitors and is still able to get customers, they are free to do so. Over the years, a retail business will be able to cover costs plus a reasonable profit and no more.

Prices charged for the same brand of product often vary between stores under different ownership. Some price variations are due to store advertising and promotion. A store may run a special for a week or longer.

Another important reason for price variation among stores for the same product is the rather common use of variable pricing. A store will price a number of items below cost, some at cost and the rest at various percentages over cost. The object of variable price merchandising is to maintain low prices on items that are price-sensitive to consumers and charge higher prices on other products.

Consumers are thought to be price-sensitive on about 300 to 500 items. These items may differ from store to store, but generally include the products we buy most frequently and that account for a significant share of a store's total sales.

A store that is especially successful at using variable-price merchandising may appear to consumers to have low prices when actually its overall price level may be relatively high. The only accurate way to determine whether a store has high or low prices would be to select a large enough list of products to measure overall price levels. Since this is beyond the practical capabilities of most consumers, variable-price merchandising results in considerable confusion.

In addition to variable-price merchandising, which practically all food retailers use, price policies can further fall into one of two categories: discount pricing or deep-cup specials.

Retailers who use discount pricing claim to have low-markups or everyday low prices on all items.

The object of deep-cut specials is to sharply lower prices on a few products to attract customers who then (the retailer hopes) will buy a broad selection of other products.

A product is a good candidate to use for deep-cut specials if it has a strong drawing power. Strong drawing power means consumers are aware of the product's price level and price changes. In addition, the product should have no close substitutes and a price change should not be viewed as a change in quality.

Products which have little drawing power include those with low prices, impulse items, most produce items, condiments and spices and many nonfood items.

Retailers continue to search for new items that can be used for price specials to attract customers.

For Unique Shopping, Visit Cuppett Farm

LINDA WILLIAMS
Bedford Co. Correspondent

NEW PARIS (Bedford Co.) — As the last days of the growing season arrive in New Paris, the Cuppett produce stand is about to close for the season.

The Cuppett Farm has been a landmark in Bedford County since the early part of the century. Charles Cuppett, the last of six Cuppett sons remembers the days when his family raised potatoes on this 35 acres of fertile land and huckstered them in nearby cities.

A 1938 Chevrolet truck is parked in front of the Cuppett homestead where Charles' son, Cecil, and his wife, Sandy and two daughters, Katie and Kimberly now live.

With a degree in biology, Cecil works in the lab of the Windber Hospital while Sandy is an elementary teacher in the Bedford School District.

Despite this busy schedule the couple finds time to oversee the planting and production of a steady stream of fruits and vegetables from early spring through the end of autumn.

The idea for a wide arrary of garden produce to be marketed to the local residents of Bedford County came from Cecil. He had been living in another state when he felt the hills of Bedford County calling him home.

Charles was raising a few crops and Cecil persuaded him "to do it right." Combining Cecil's biology degree with Charles' homespun knowledge was a good mix. The result is normally propitious crops. This year the drought did its share of damage, but a good variety was still available.

It's a year-round job. As the snow begins to melt, the Cuppetts tap the nearby trees for maple syrup.

Then, it's "pea-picking" time. The peas are followed by strawberries, cabbage, broccoli, peppers, red and white potatoes. tomatoes, blackberries, raspberries, sweet corn, green and yellow beans, Italian beans, limas, sweet potatoes, brussel sprouts and the fruits of the fall, Halloween pumpkins, gourds and squash.

Sandy Cuppett and her daughters, Kimberly and Katie.

Shoppers have the unique experience of holiday shopping in the Victorian farmhouse located on the Cuppett farm.

Customers are invited to come to New Paris and pick their own produce or, they can purchase from the shop located in an old schoolhouse on the Cuppett property.

It was this school that gave Sandy the incentive for her latest project, a craft shop to combine with the harvested garden produce.

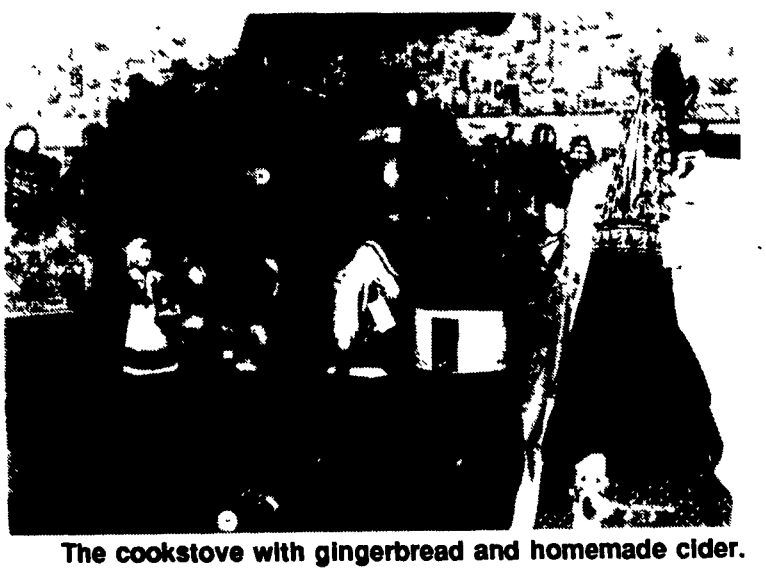
"It seemed like the perfect combination," Sandy says. "I started with tote bags and aprons. When they were a success, I started looking around for more craft talents to add to the shop."

Although pregnant with Kimberly at the time, Sandy found it good exercise to help Cecil tear down the old horsehair plaster in the schoolhouse and do over the blackened hardwood floors creating a setting befitting of the craft adventure.

On several weekends, the Cuppetts invited craftspeople to come to the farm and demonstrate their talents. Cecil played music over the loudspeakers and served strawberries or watermelon or whatever was in season.

"Then, I realized warm weather was going to come to an end and I wasn't ready to close down," Sandy says. There are two Victorian farm houses on the Cuppett farm. One is home for Cecil and Sandy, the other has been vacant for a number of years.

"I decided to extend my craft idea to the other farm house and add a fire in the cookstove, hot cider on the stove, and fresh baked gingerbread," Sandy says.



The cookstove with gingerbread and homemade cider.

The shop will remain open throughout November and December, five days a week from 1 until 5 p.m. The "keepers of the store," will be Cecil's retired parents and Sandy's mother.

"They volunteered," Sandy says. "And, I think it will be fun for all of them."

Sandy says she has selected her crafts carefully looking for workmanship and ingenuity. Featured will be dried arrangements for the wall or table, miniatures, handmade toys, aprons, tote bags, and Christmas ornaments.

The items will be displayed throughout the entire old farmhouse which will also be decorated for the holidays. "We're hoping it will be a unique shopping experience for many," Sandy says.

On being a farm wife - And other hazards

Joyce Bupp

The value which we place on a given commodity is in direct proportion to its level of abundance.

In my garden, that's considered the "rotten tomato" theory.

A rotten tomato tossed away in August has practically no significance whatsoever. After all, in August those stalks are fat-stemmed, lush with leaves and hanging full with fruits ranging from red-ripe, fist-size to pin-head tomato embryos.

One, two, or even a half-dozen, overripe tomatoes are a mere squishy inconvenience. When the Farmer was a youngster and his family grew a couple of acres of tomatoes, overripe ones made handy target practice ammunition.

But now, with a couple of frosty-white mornings behind us and the prized stash of tomatoes dwindling, every rotting one that has to be pitched is a source of personal disappointment. One less for tomato salad, one less for topping tossed greens, one less for slicing in sandwiches.

And a few freeze-spared, orange-ripe tomatoes found under the tangled brown mass of shriveled stems and dead leaves are gently carried to the house like delicate treasure.

The dminishing returns from a frost-bitten vegetable patch enhance our appreciation of those few remaining, prized, fresh pickin's.

Late-planted broccoli stalks for fall use matured extra quickly in the extended, sunny warmth of the season. Not only does my home-grown broccoli develop a strong, unpleasant taste in hot weather, it also quickly becomes infested with oodles of little green worms. Regular spraying would eliminate those, but barn and office chores take precedence over buggy vegetables.

So the wormy heads of broccoli were lopped off and recycled to soil. That encouraged the beheaded stalks to send out little side shoots. Cooler temperatures zapped the little green worms and mellowed the flavor of those tender, tasty, little shoots.

Plastic feed bags sheltered the two most productive bell pepper plants through the first hard frost. But the second white-morning cold snap caught me by surprise and pretty well halted pepper production. A few half-sized green fruits hiding under semi-scorched leaves will be the last to add their flavorful crunchiness to our dinnertime salads.

That repeat hit by Jack Frost also finished off this year's most pleasant garden surprise. Poor planning sent me scrounging around a local garden center in mid-summer, searching for string bean seeds to plant for a late crop. The only bean seeds left were of the Roma variety, a wider, flatter type.

They germinated almost overnight in the warm (and hand-watered) soil and in just a couple of weeks were hanging full of blossoms. Their larger conformation yielded about twice the bean flesh of the round type, and with an excellent flavor. About eight feet of row produced all the fresh green beans we could eat -- and rendered me a Roma fan. Wish chilly, old Jack had left his frosty fingers off those.

Planted along with the broccoli in early August were a dozen cauliflower seedlings. They poked along, growing more slowly than the broccoli, and are finally yielding wide, white heads of delicious eating. With everything else in the vegetable patch reduced to frost-blackened history, these creamy cauliflower heads wrapped naturally in crisp, blue-green leaves are the last major payback for faithful mulching and jugs of water carried.

Depositing an armful of these tail-end garden treasures on the kitchen counter a few days ago, I suddenly realized this was the stuff of the classic cornucopia of November calendars. A few bright tomatoes, green pepper or two, lingering broccoli shoots, and a crisp cauliflower head tossed into a basket, along with maybe a handful of crisp, sweet, red and yellow apples.

And the "rotten tomato" theory dictates a renewed appreciation for these last delightful fresh things snatched away from Jack Frost's cold clutches.

"Microwave Magic"

By:
Carol Stark

If your microwave oven has more power settings than just on and off, it has variable power. Variable power means that your microwave oven can cook at different speeds, such as low, medium, and high. High power usually means about 100 percent power, medium power means about 70 percent power, and low about 10 percent power.

Stirring is something that is essential in microwave cooking. As you microwave, the heat penetrates the outside areas of food and will cook foods unevenly unless you stir them. Foods that can't be stirred should be rotated by turning the dish a quarter or half turn. Rotating moves the food to different areas of the oven and helps it cook evenly.

Standing time lets most foods, whether cooked conventionally or in the microwave, continue to cook once they are removed from the oven. But in microwave cooking this is more noticeable. To compensate, large or dense foods need standing time. That means you cook the food till it is almost done, and then let it stand it is done.

With Christmas parties coming up, why not try a Cheese Fondue?

Ingredients:
2 cups shredded cheddar cheese
2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese
1 teaspoon caraway
½ cup non-alcoholic beer
3 tablespoons all purpose flour
Bread cubes or vegetable dippers

In a mixing bowl toss together flour, cheese, and seasoning. In a 2-quart casserole micro-cook liquid, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1 to 1½ minutes or until hot. Add cheese mixture to hot liquid. Micro-cook uncovered on 50 percent power (medium) for 7 to 9 minutes or until cheese is melted, stirring every 2 minutes.

If desired, place in a fondue pot over low heat to keep warm or reheat as necessary in the casserole on 50 percent power (medium) for 2 to 3 minutes. Serve with bread cubes or vegetable dippers. Makes serving for 8.

Cheese Puff

Ingredients:
1 10-ounce package of frozen chopped broccoli
½ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
1 cup shredded Swiss cheese (4 ounces)
¼ cup butter or margarine
¼ cup all purpose flour

4 egg yolks
4 egg whites
¼ teaspoon cream of tartar

Prick vegetable package in several place. Place on paper toweling in microwave oven. Cover with vented clear plastic wrap. Micro-cook on 100 percent power (high) for 3 to 5 minutes or till bubbly, stirring every minute. Micro-cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 1 minute. Stir in cheese till melted. Stir in vegetable.

Beat egg yolks slightly. Slowly add to vegetable mixture, stirring constantly. Using clean beaters, beat egg whites and cream of tartar with an electric mixer until stiff peaks form. Gently fold into vegetable mixture.

Pour into an ungreased 8-inch round baking disk. Micro-cook, uncovered, on 50 percent power (medium) for 14 to 18 minutes or until just set in center, rotating dish a half turn 3 or 4 times. Serve immediately. Makes 4 servings.

½ pound bulk pork
1 medium tomato, chopped
½ teaspoon dried basil, crushed
½ cup shredded American cheese (2 ounces)
¼ cup sliced green onion
8 beaten eggs
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon pepper

In an 8-inch round baking dish, crumble meat. Micro-cook, uncovered, on 100 percent power (high) for 3 to 5 minutes or until meat loses its pink color, stirring once during cooking. Drain off fat, reserving 2 tablespoons drippings in the baking dish. Place meat on paper toweling. Micro-cook green onion, uncovered, in reserved drippings on 100 percent power (high) for 1 to 2 minutes or until just tender.

In mixing bowl, stir together eggs, milk, salt, pepper, vegetable, and seasoning; pour over onion in baking dish. Know Anything About This Horsewheel?

BETHLEHEM (Lehigh Co.) — Do you know anything about an 18th Century wooden horsewheel?

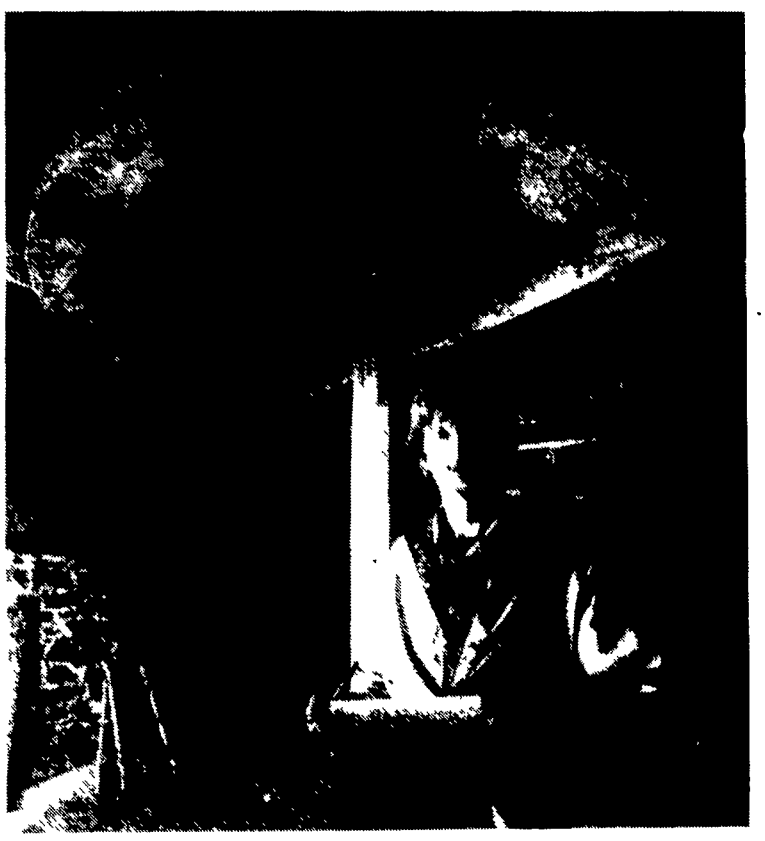
To complete the restoration of an 18th century farm in Bethlehem, and to demonstrate family farming from 1748-1848, the Burnside Plantation is interested in information pertaining to the supporting struts and arms which were attached to the horses of the huge wheel.

The wooden horsewheels were also called sweep powers, horse powers, or "geppel." The wooden wheel has a diameter of 13 feet and is located approximately 10 feet above floor level.

"Burnside would like to talk to anyone who knows something about them," said Kathleen Manolescu, site manager at Burnside Plantation. "To properly interpret the wheel, information is also sought on when and how it was used, in particular with early threshing machines."

If you have information about the wheel, contact Manolescu at Burnside Plantation, P.O. Box 559, Bethlehem, PA 18016-0559 or call (215) 868-5044.

Burnside Planation is the site of an original, pre-Revolutionary War farmhouse and the remaining 6.5 acres of an 18th Century farm, according to a museum brochure. The farm will become a "living history" farm where visitors, including school groups, will learn through participation and observation of farm activities and domestic crafts what Moravian farm life was like more than 200 years ago.



James Kircker, Roundout Woodworking, Inc., Saugerties, N.Y., is the millwright helping with the restoration of this 18th Century wooden horsewheel. Burnside Plantation is looking for information on the construction of the wheel and how it was used. Photo copyright (C) The Morning Call, used by permission.

ANSWER — A Silver Spring, Md., reader wanted to know how to plant and grow citron, and if it is grown in Pa.? Thanks to several readers for answering this request. Elsie Stauffer, 200 Parkview Heights Road, Ephrata, PA 17522, said that she has grown citrons for a number of years. She plants them the same way as watermelons. She finds that citrons are hardier than watermelon. In fact, one year, the citron field was plowed over for the winter and it came up the next year. She has seed if someone is interested. Maybelle Page, Oxford, wrote that her brother grew citron in his garden and it does well. He purchased his seeds from R.H. Shumway, Pioneer American Seedsman, Graniteville, SC 29829.

The Cashtown Lions Club and the Adams County Poultry Association co-sponsor the round-up which begins at 6:30 p.m. with dinner followed by a public auction of all the capons exhibited.

Each 4-H member is required to exhibit one pair of matched dressed capons at Round-up. They are judged on finish; dressing; freedom from cuts, bruises, tears, and pin feathers; properly packaged, and straightness of the breastbone and weight.

The Capon project is one of over 100 different project areas youth 8-19 years old can get involved in as a member of 4-H. 4-H Capon Round-up is a culmination of a year of long hard work for these 4-H members. The project involves raising at least 20 capons starting at 3 weeks of age until they weigh approximately 9 pounds dressed weight. The members are involved in the day to day care of the birds, keeping financial records, and marketing.

If you have questions or need additional information about the 4-H Capon Round-up you can contact the Adams County Cooperative Extension Office at 334-6271 or 624-4525.

ANSWER — Michael McClure, Paruton, Md., wanted to know how to can beef. Thanks to Ann Kramer, Newmanstown, for suggesting that those who want to can contact their local Extension Service. They have two excellent books free of charge that are published by Penn State and have instructions to can everything. Another book that she fould helpful is the Ball Blue Book. Send $3.50 for your copy to Ball Corporation, Box 2005, Dept. PK6A, Muncie, IN 47302.

ANSWER — Janet Miller, Easton, requested recipes to make jelly and jam that does not use Certo, Sure-Jell or other additives to thicken it. Thanks to Emily Wells, Dry Fork, Va., who send the following recipe that can be used to make any kind of flavor such as grape, apple, or blackberry.

Jelly

1 cup juice, any flavor
1¼ cup sugar

Measure juice, put in pan and boil for 10 minutes. Have sugar measured in another pan. Pour boiled juice over sugar and stir until sugar has melted. Pour into sterilized jars and cap.

ANSWER — Helen Kirsch, Carrolltown, would like recipes for rye breads and other bread recipes that do not use wheat or white flour. Thanks to Deirdre Kirby of Hope, NJ, who cautions that some so-called rye flours really contain some wheat flour. She suggests buying various flours such as rice, barley, buckwheat or quinoa grain flours at a health food store. These flours have recipes printed on the packages. You can also buy ready-made mixes where you just add milk, egg, oil, etc. The texture will not be like whole wheat bread because these flours lack gluten, but the bread is very tasty.

ANSWER — Melanie Jones, Annville, requested recipes for low sugar jams, butters, applesauce, and other items to can. Thanks to Sonya Zehr of Croghan, NY, who sent a recipe for low-calorie applesauce. And to a reader for low-sugar spreads.

No-Sugar, Yellow Delicious Applesauce

Allow apples to ripen until they are at their sweetest. Cook apples and prepare sauce as in other recipes, but do not add sugar. This is a surprisingly naturally sweet sauce. Also makes an excellent no-sugar baby food.

Refrigerated Grape Spread

2 tablespoons unflavored gelatin powder
1 24-ounce bottle unsweetened grape juice
2 tablespoon bottled lemon juice
2 tablespoons liquid low-calorie sweetner

In a saucepan, soften the gelatin in the grape and lemon juices. Bring to a full rolling boil to dissolve gelatin. Boil 1 minute and remove from heat. Stir in sweetner. Fill jars quickly, leaving ¼ -inch headspace. Adjust lids. Do not process or freeze. Caution: Store in refrigerator and use within 4 weeks.

Lawn Care Isn't Finished

RUTGERS (Hunterdon Co.) — Recent greening of summer brown lawns is striking evidence that fall favors grass growth. Lawn care season isn't over yet and won't be for several weeks.

Don't put the mower away until the lawn stops growing. Letting grass go into winter several inches long can set up conditions that may result in lawn damage. Keep mowing at a height of 2-2½ inches until there is nothing more to cut. Newly seeded lawns should first be mowed when they reach 3-4 inches and then be kept at 2-2/12 inches also.

Another threat to lawns is fallen leaves. It may be tempting to put off raking until the trees are bare, but mats of leaves building up on a lawn can damage it in a short time. So, don't let fallen leaves lie; keep them cleaned up and put them to use through composting and mulching.

Soil that is too acid (pH too low) is hazardous to lawn health. Fall is an ideal time to correct that problem if it exists. It's best to lime according to recommendations, based on soil pH tests, which are available (generally within one week) from Cooperative Extension. Call (908) 788-1339 for proper soil sampling procedures.

This is also the best time to take soil samples from lawns (and other garden areas) and have them tested for fertilizer recommendations. It can take up to several weeks to receive results from Rutgers; test now so you will have your recommendations for spring. The sample mailing kit may be purchased for ($6.00 each) at the Extension Center.

Do It Today

I got married on October 5. The Saturday dawned with clear, sunny skies. Music wove magic through the air. The wild flowers, carefully arranged, created a touch of simplistic beauty. It was the way I had dreamed.

And yet in the days surrounding my wedding and even in the first few weeks back at the office, I have swallowed a strong dose of reality. Real world pains, real world sorrows. I have also seen an amazing strength in the people who are living this reality.

After experiencing the highs and the lows, the magic and the reality, I began to think and say one thing... "If it's important, do it today. Do it today."

A brief five minutes before my wedding rehearsal was to begin, I received word that my best friend, one of my attendants, was critically injured in an auto accident. She lay lifelessly in a coma for three weeks and then died. I was reminded how precious time is and how fleeting are the moments that people share together.

Other news came.. job losses, emergency surgeries, tumors. And people called me at work. One wanted information on estate planning. She was 69 years old and didn't have an estate plan. She seemed content to wait in hopes that we would plan a daytime workshop series. And I kept saying in my mind, "No, don't wait. Do it today."

Another woman called me desperately looking for help because she expected to run out of heating oil by the afternoon. I felt honest sorrow for her. And yet I thought, had she called several weeks ago, she would have had more options. More people might have found ways to help. But she was in the ninth hour and needed cash now.

What is it in humans that gives us a sometimes false assurance that life will continue as it always has — that we can put off until tomorrow what really should be done today, NOW?

I am not one to advocate spending mindlessly because you might not be able to enjoy it later. I also don't think that a lack of knowing the future should keep us from setting plans in motion for the months and years ahead. We still need to have goals, to have hopes, and to have expectations.

I have those. But I also have renewed incentive to do important things now...to say "I love you", to resolve an argument, to smile at a stranger, to update my retirement and life insurance beneficiaries, to watch sunsets, to sing, to walk in the newly-fallen leaves, to soak up the sights and scents of another autumn.

Tomorrow I may not have those chances.

What important, special things have you been putting off? A conversation or outing with a child? A discussion about life decisions with an aging parent? Saving for a child's college eduation? Writing a will? Initiating a family reunion? Offering an apology?

Whatever it is, stop procrastinating. Do it today. After all, you've been worrying about it, and you've been feeling guilty about it for some time now. Once done, the satisfaction and relief you gain will be refreshing — as refreshing as bright sunshine on a crisp November morning, as refreshing as familiar music wafting through an open window.

Do it today. Enjoy the refreshing sense of satisfaction. And believe that tomorrow, with its reality and challenges, will hold in its grasps yet another opportunity for joy.

Ask the "Eggsperts"

Which egg dishes contain 30% calories or less from fat?

The very sound advice to reduce your fat intake to no more than 30% of calories from fat has been widely misinterpreted. This fat "allowance" is meant for the long haul, not for every individual food or combination dish or every meal you eat. You'll find it's quite difficult to get a balanced diet containing all the nutrients you need if you restrict your diet to only those individual foods or dishes that contain 30% or less calories from fat.

Instead, follow the basic rules of variety and moderation. The Dietary Guidelines for Americans recommend 6 or more servings of whole-grain breads, cereals and grain products; 5 or more servings of fruits and vegetables; 2 to 3 servings of lean meat, fish, poultry, eggs and dry beans and peas; 2 servings of low-fat or skim milk and milk products; and fats and sweets in moderation according to your overall calorie needs.

If you follow this pattern and make lean choices within each category, you should have little trouble meeting the "30%" guideline.

For egg dishes, choose recipes that use little to no fat, prepare them with low-fat or skim milk products, and serve them with lots of fruits, vegetables and grain foods.

Why are eggs smaller today?

Eggs may seem to look smaller today, but they're not. The same USDA size standards have been used for many years and are based on minimum net weight per dozen. For the sizes most often available at the supermarket one dozen eggs weigh at least: Extra Large, 27 ounces; Large, 24 ounces and Medium, 21 ounces.

However, eggs are fresher today than in the past. Their yolks stand up taller and the white is higher and sits more closely around the yolk. This may make your eggs look smaller when you break them out into a pan.

What should I look for when putting eggs in salt water to check their freshness?

Nothing. A freshly laid egg and an older egg might react very similarly. A carefully controlled brine test is sometimes used to judge shell thickness, not freshness, of eggs for hatching purposes. This test has no application to the freshness of table eggs. The best way to judge freshness of eggs is to check the date on the carton. (See How's Your Egg Q?)

Ida's Notebook

Ida Risser

We have finally moved to our new house and now I'm knee-deep in boxes. The first few days it is a struggle to find necessary items. Were are the postage stamps? How do you cut paper without a scissors or a knife? And, what happened to all of the pencils and pens?

Jeffrey, who lives in Georgia, came and helped us for five days while his sister took care of his children. The children from the two families were ages five, three, two and one. One attends kindergarten and one goes to pre-school, which necessitated a lot of traveling between the two homes.

With Jeffrey and Philip's help all of the big pieces were moved and set in place. We have an 1873 cherry bedroom suite, which was my grandfather Landises and it was handmade by a neighbor long ago.

I tackled the kitchen first as that is one of the most important rooms. So, we haven't missed any meals. The problem is that as it is smaller than my previous one there is no place for a lot of items. Even the stove is not a nice big 40-inch one that I had previously used.

Before the frost, with Allen's help, I moved more than 100 houseplants to two big bay windows and to a shelf stand.

When I finally unpack my big collection of dishes, in some 20 boxes, it will be a colorful event. You see, I wrapped all of them in Christmas paper that I'd saved for 20 years. I was just ready to burn the bags of beautiful paper when I realized how I could use them. But again, I'll have one less built-in corner cupboard to store them in.

Gradually we'll become accustomed to our new surroundings but I'll miss all of the activity that happens daily on the dairy farm.

No Peeking At Poinsettias

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — With a little coaxing, you can get your flowering houseplants to bloom for this holiday season. But you have to be disciplined, says Dr. Robert Nuss, professor of ornamental horticulture in Penn State's College of Agriculture.

If you have a poinsettia from last Christmas, keep its soil moist and fertilize it every seven to 10 days with one-half teaspoon of a soluble fertilizer such as 15-15-15 in a quart of warm water. These fertilizers are available at any garden center.

Poinsettias need long, dark nights to form their colorful bracts. Starting in October, keep your poinsettia in a completely dark place between 5 p.m. and 8 a.m. every night until Thanksgiving.

"During these hours, you must stay out of the closet or room where you're keeping the plant," says Nuss. "Even peeking in or briefly turning on the light will upset the process."

Between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m., set the poinsettia in a warm, sunny window. Soon you will see leaves and flower buds forming. "Poinsettias are sensitive to sudden changes in temperature and improper watering or light conditions," says Nuss. "Keep the temperature between 60 and 75 degrees, even during the times when the plant is kept in the dark."

After Thanksgiving, you can put your poinsettia out on display. Continue watering, fertilizing and giving it plenty of sun. Beginning in March, stop fertilizing and gradually reduce water to about a cupful once a week, storing the dormant plant in a cool, well ventilated place out of direct sunlight until May.

In May, cut the plant back to three to five inches high, start watering more and fertilizing regularly, and return the plant to a sunny window. "You can move poinsettias outside into light shade when nights are at least 60 degrees Fahrenheit," says Nuss. "To shape them, pinch back each shoot once during the summer."

When cool nights start in late August, bring your poinsettia inside to a sunny window in a room with temperatures no higher than 60 to 62 degrees Fahrenheit. Starting in October, begin the regimen of long, dark periods once again. "By following all these steps, you can keep poinsettias for years," says Nuss.

Christmas and Thanksgiving cacti are a little easier to care for and produce filmy, orchidlike flowers in red, white or pink. Some of these cacti also will flower at Easter.

"One of the main things to remember about these plants is that they're not like typical cacti," says Nuss. "They require as much water as other houseplants. Their soil should be kept moist but not soggy."

To develop blooms, these cacti require cool temperatures in the fall. If you need to bring your flowering cacti inside before October, keep them out of bright light in a cool room.

Bring them to a sunny window as soon as buds start to show. "If your cactus starts to drop its buds, the plant may need repotting, more sunlight or a lower temperature," says Nuss. "They seldom flower well at temperatures above 70 degrees Fahrenheit."

After the cactus stops blooming, keep it in a cool, sunny window. In summer, put it outside in light shade and leave it there as long as possible into the fall.

"Holiday-flowering plants are more challenging than a lot of houseplants," says Nuss. "But that adds to the enjoyment. It can be very satisfying to coax them into flowering."

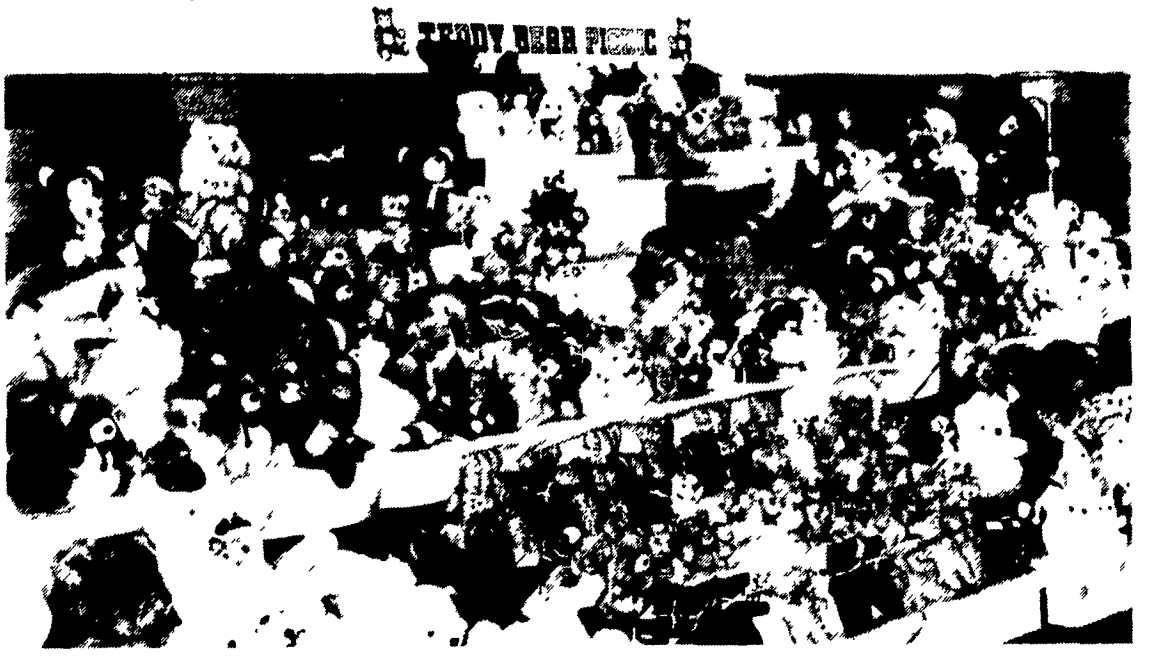
Grange Fosters Teddy Bear Picnic

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — When more than 1,000 Grange members converged at the Jaffa Mosque in Altoona last week for their 119th annual state convention, they brought some extra things along with them. Teddy Bears! 619 of them! And stuffed toys! 5,000 of them!

Grangers at the 199th Pennsylvania State Grange Convention in Altoona display the results of their talents.

Contests bring out friendly competition during the convention. Grangers make crafts and projects, including quilts, for display.



More than 619 Teddy Bears attended the "Teddy Bear Picnic" at the Grange Convention. Grangers make the bears for "at-risk" babies - ones with AIDS or who are chemically dependent. Other stuffed toys - 5,000 in all - will go to children of trauma.

The impressive "Teddy Bear Picnic" display represents one of the many facets of the organization called Grange.

The Pennsylvania State Grange, a fraternal grass roots organization, meets annually at its convention to discuss and approve resolutions, honor outstanding members, conduct business, hear keynote speakers, enjoy the fellowship of other Grangers, and to participate in some statewide community service projects, including the gathering of Teddy Bears for "at risk" babies.

State Grange lecturer (program director) Hedy Chaffee, hoping to gather up to 500 bears, can now distribute the 619 bears across the state through an organization known as ABC Quilts. Formed in 1988 in New Hampshire, ABC Quilts donates quilts to hospitals to wrap up "at-risk" babies - those with AIDS or who are chemically addicted. Since January 1991, the ABC Quilts western branch has collected and distributed 250 quilts.

Grangers also reach out to help other children through a stuffed toy contest. This year's 5,000 toys, after judging, will be distributed to Ronald McDonald houses, Police Departments, Ambulance services, and other organizations who help traumatized children.

The community service and social aspects of Grange remain strong, attesting to the fact that Grange began, in 1867, for those very reasons.

"Back when Grange was formed after the Civil War, there weren't televisions and radios, In the rural communities, Grange was a way for people to get together and have entertainment also," said Steve Robinson, public relations director for the Pennsylvania state Grange.

But the purpose of Grange goes even further. This rural-farm fraternity, the second largest farm organization in America, concerns itself with the well-being of all people by supporting legislative activity to improve the quality of rural life.

At this year's convention, delegates at Wednesday's session discussed, along with many others, resolutions opposing school strikes, supporting binding arbitration, and supporting voter approval of school board tax increases that are higher than the current rate of inflation.

Resolutions of national interest become part of those discussed and voted upon at the 125th national "Celebrate Grange" Convention to be held in Burlington, Vt. this month.

With more than 40,000 members in Pennsylvania, Grangers look to the future hoping to increase awareness of their organization. Grange was the first organization to include women on an equal basis with men, with equal voting privileges, long before women obtained voting rights. Grange also believes in the power of that voting privilege and works legislatively for a better future.

Faced with a decreasing farming population, Grangers emphasize the need to attract members from all walks of life, including rural and suburban. The benefits of Grange membership are available to all.

As Robinson said, "A lot of people hear 'agriculture' and 'rural' and think that Grange isn't for them because they are in a suburban community. But membership is really open to everyone."

Seminar Teaches About Families Under Seige

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

MECHANICSBURG (Cumberland Co.) — "The family is under seige," Dr. James Van Horn told those who attended the seminar on Building Strong Families, held at the Holiday Inn, Mechanicsburg, on November 1.

Dr. Van Horn, who was the keynote speaker, teaches and writes about rural family stresses and strengths for Penn State.

A slight-built man with glasses, Dr. Van Horn, who has five children ranging in ages from 12 to 21, is a witty story teller who illustrated his talk with antidotes of families under stress.

"There are significant changes not only in the structure of the family but also in the norms whereby we live," Dr. Van Horn said. "Whether we subscribe to the changes or not, they are occurring. Stress accompanies these changes because people do not what is expected of them."

Add to the changes are figures that show that two-thirds of first marriages will end in divorce. In addition is the quest for time.

Dr. Van Horn gave the example of a male and female who walk up to the door side by side. "There was a time, when the man could have two grocery bags in his hands and somehow he was expected to grab the door handle with his little finger and open it because that was the proper and expected behavior in that era. Today, neither the man or woman are sure who will open the door.

"If the couple hold to tradition, the male will lunge for the door and the female will step back. In another situation, the female will practically put her fist through the door because she is going to assert herself."

Each of those situations illustrate the 20 percent at each end of the spectrum.

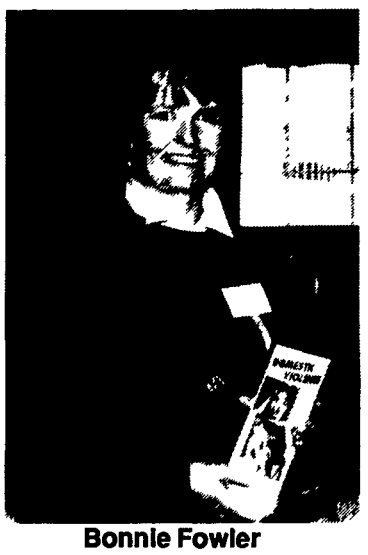
"In between are a whale of a lot of people who walk up to a door and wonder what to do," said Dr. Van Horn.

Situations such as these cause problems in marriages and with children because people do not have clear set of expectations laid out for them. This causes tremendous anxiety. What am I supposed to be doing? Lay on that pressure the enormous pressure of time.

The big issue in the '90s is discretionary time and the pressures that people feel, Dr. Van Horn believes.

"If anyone ran for Congress on the platform that they would create the eighth day of the week, they would probably win," Dr. Van Horn surmised.

Question of diversity also creates enormous problems in this country.



Bonnie Fowler

"We are moving close to a caste system. We have frozen people in poverty, and are close to establishing a formal or informal caste-like system that is creating helplessness.

"One in five kids is in poverty. In rural communities, we have 25 percent of children living in families at or below the poverty line," Dr. Van Horn said.

"We are dealing with an adverse set of family structures where 25 percent of children live in single families.

When two-thirds of marriages end in divorce, real-life kids feel the stress of divorce. And the number of hours that mothers spend in attorney offices is astronmical trying to get child support.

"A lot of kids don't have parents.

In addition, Dr. Van Horn said that white American does not know how to deal with cultures from other backgrounds.

"We have a white privilege that we drag through life. If a white professional is at home and dressed in woodworking clothes when he needs to take his child with a cut on the face to an emergency room, the white American merely tells the hospital admissions clerk that the child fell down the steps. Because the professional has insurance, he can zip right in and out of the hospital. Take same situation, same dress, same kids, but have a black or Asian American who has no insurance, has an accent, and that parents is highly suspect of child abuse.

"In the '90s, we must deal with differences, honor differences, and understand them. To do otherwise in families is to do a tremendous inservice to the world," Dr. Van Horn said.

One reason, children get short changed is that they are not at the top of the list. Work and recreation takes precedence over a child's place in the family.

Advocates parents spending uninterrupted time with children and teens. "Parents should appear so busy that they don't have time to spend with their children.

(Turn to Page B17)

"There are pressures on farm families that urban families don't have and vice versa. Farm families are less inclined to seek professional help and are notorious for denying family stresses." said Dr. Van Horn, who writes a column on marriage and family strengths, which appears in 90 newspapers.

Child Care Nutrition Workshops

CLEARFIELD (Clearfield Co.) — Caring for children includes the challenge of providing nutritious meals and snacks that children will want to eat. The Penn State Cooperative Extension in Clearfield and Jefferson Counties is sponsoring a two-part workshop on childhood nutrition. The workshops are prepared for family day care providers; however the content is appropriate for preschool personnel, church school teachers, parents, and other persons working with young children.

"Nutrition and Child Care" will be presented Wednesday, November 6. Andrea Bressler, Extension agent, will present the basics of childhood nutrition and menu planning. Recommended serving sizes for various ages of children will be detailed; as well as reading labels to determine fat, sugar and sodium content.

Sue Masters, Child Care Food Program monitor with the Clearfield County League on Social Services, Inc., will be discussing the reimbursement process for foods prepared in family day care homes. Beginning in July 1992, legal non-registered providers as well as registered providers will be eligible to participate in the Child Care Food Program.

The second workshop, "Beyond the Peanut Butter Sandwich," will be held on Monday, November 18. Marci Nebgen, Penn State Nutrition Education Advisor, will be discussing mealtime concerns, such as how to encourage children to eat and try new foods. She'll also share tips on food preparation, and numerous food activities for children. Participants will taste test some kid-tested recipes.

Both workshops will be held in the restaurant/dining Area of the Clearfield County Vo-Tech School, from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. There is no fee for either workshop, but interested persons will need to register by calling either Andrea Bressler, at (814) 765-7878, or Nancy Covert at (814) 849-7361.

Seminar

Purpose of seminar is to meet and share ideas and establish common goals. Too often the agencies do not have a good working relationship, don't know what each others strengths are or they don't know about each other. May end up duplicating efforts.

Agencies that participated in addition to Penn State Extension included Family and Children's Services, Drug and Alcohol Commission, Domestic Violence Services, Women's Resource Center, Agency on Aging, Alternative Human Resource Development, Kim Lemon, co-anchor for WGAL-TV evening and late reports, Harrisburg School District, Salem U.C.C. Church, Redevelopment Authority, and Family Public Housing.

Dairylea Membership Increases, Receives Honors

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Dairylea Cooperative Inc., recently presented a number of awards and honors to outstanding members during its annual meeting and family banquet, held Oct. 15 in Liverpool, N.Y.

Farm partners Leslie and Dorothy Rathbun and Brian Doyle of Schenevus, N.Y., were honored as the grand winners of Dairylea Cooperative Inc.'s Quality Recognition Program at the meeting.

For the past eight years, Dairylea has sponsored a Quality Recognition Program that honors cooperative producers for their outstanding achievements in producing excellent raw milk. All member farms are tested monthly based on strict criteria.

The Rathbuns and Doyle farm 345 acres in Otsego County and milk 40 Holsteins, most of which are registered. Corn and hay are grown on their operation, Lesdorath Farm, which has been ranked among Dairylea's top quality farms twice before.

Other producers honored include: Robert and Helen Coutts of Paupack; Joyce Mazzga of Hawley; Raymond and June Alleger of Cameron, N.Y.; Torrance Farms, Peru, N.Y.; Robert Jr. and Thelma Adams of Equinunk; Allan and Janet Schnakenberg of Equinunk; Harold and Beverley Snyder of Alfred Station. N.Y.; Jon and June Ocker of Mifflinburg; and Peter and Brenda Lathrop, and Eugene and Gertrude Lathrop of Sherburne, N.Y.

Honored For Service

During the banquet, several dairy farmers were honored as 50-year members of Dairylea.

Recognized were: Gerald and Ada Casler of Fort Plain, N.Y.; Edward Jr. and Elizabeth Hancock of Sanitaria Springs, N.Y.; Gerald and Dorothy Kerwin of Pavilion, N.Y.; G. R. and Helen MacPherson of Romulus, N.Y.; Edward and Eva Sharp of Byron, N.Y.; and Guy and Anna Wells of Montrose.

Youths Receive Sexauer Award

Kimberly Meyer, of Hammond, N.Y., and Kevin Reuss, of Harford, received Dairylea Cooperative's Fred H. Sexauer Award at the Cooperative's family banquet.

The monetary award is presented annually to Dairylea youths who exhibit outstanding service, leadership and a demonstrated spirit of cooperation.

The award is in memory of Fred Sexauer, who served as president of the Dairymen's League Cooperative Association (now Dairylea Cooperative) from 1928-1945.

Kimberly Meyer, the daughter of Dairylea members Terry and Sharol Neuroth, currently attends Mater Dei College in Ogdensburg, N.Y., where she is majoring in early elementary education.

In high school, she was class secretary her junior and senior years, was active in 4-H, and was a member of the National Honor Society. Additionally, she was listed in Who's Who Among High School Students.

Meyer also held various offices in the New York State Junior Guernsey Breeders Association where she showed cattle. In 1989, she was New York State Guernsey Princess, and was named Miss Congeniality at the national pageant in Indiana. Currently, Meyer is serving as St. Lawrence County Alternate Dairy Princess.

Kevin Reuss, the son of Willi and Lili Reuss, attends Pennsylvania State University's Worthington Campus in Dunmore, and is majoring in secondary education with a concentration in earth and space science.

Reuss is a member of the Dairylea Young Cooperator Coordinating Committee and serves as vice president of the group.

This summer, he was a member of the scholar staff at the Pennsylvania Council of Cooperatives Summer Institute at Shippensburg University. Last year, he attended the National Institute of Cooperative Education, held in St. Paul, Minn.

In high school, Reuss was a member of the senior band and the marching band. Currently, the alto saxophone player is a member of the Penn Dixie Band, a professional band based in South Gibson.

Past Year's Accomplishments

"No matter how you measure it, our progress during the past year was impressive," announced Dairylea Chief Executive Officer Rick Smith at the cooperative's annual meeting.

More than 800 member farmers and industry guests attended the two-day event, which included management presentations by Smith and Edward Bangel, Dairylea vice president of finance and administration, and an annual address by Dairylea President Clyde Rutherford.

During his presentation, Smith said that the cooperative paid members competitive premiums throughout the year, averaging more than $1 million a month.

In addition, he said that Dairylea members received a year-end, 6-cent per hundredweight (of milk) cash patronage dividend, representing a 15-percent return on investment.

Other positive financial indicators reported by Smith included: working capital increased 30 percent ($1.5 million) from last year; equity improved nearly 20 percent; and earnings totalled $1.9 million, roughly equal to last year.

Other highlights of Smith's report included: 179 new members joined Dairylea in the past fiscal year; 86 new members joined in the first six months of the current fiscal year; and member milk increased last year by 100,000,000 pounds while projected to increase by another 200,000,000 pounds by the end of fiscal 1992.

Additionally, Smith said Dairylea remained committed to providing members with innovative and needed services and programs.

These programs include top-rated health insurance coverages, milk check direct deposit, workers' compensation (in New York), a member loan program, a member medical reimbursement plan, and leadership and farm family programs.

In his address, Rutherford discussed the climate of the dairy industry, saying that Dairylea and other cooperatives have played a positive role for farmers now and in the past.

"Cooperatives are and will be the driving force of the dairy industry as we move forward," he told the audience.

"Cooperatives have the resources needed to play a major role in establishing policy at both the regional and national levels."

Members and guests had the opportunity to attend sessions called "Financial Planning on the Farm," "Producing Quality Milk," and "Managing Stress."

Guest speakers included Francis Gregerson, chairman of the Beef Industry Council and Jim Barr, chief executive officer of the National Milk Producers Federation.

Gregerson spoke to the delegate body on the relationship between the dairy and beef industries, while Barr provided an update of industry issues pending in Washington.

Dairylea, a Syracuse-based dairy cooperative with 2,300 farmer members throughout the Northeast, participates in a milk marketing network stretching from Maine to Maryland to Ohio.

West Pa. Sets Street Tree Seminar

GREENSBURG (Westmoreland Co.) — To help municipalities, parks, and developments understand how to maintain and improve trees in the landscape, there will be a Street Tree Seminar held at the Palace Inn, Monroeville on Thursday, November 14 from 8:30 a.m.-3 p.m.

Trees contribute a great deal of our residential areas. Trees add beauty to a home or business, making a more pleasant atmosphere in which to live or work. Trees also shade our homes from the hot sun in summer and help to break the cold winter winds.

All of these benefits are reflected in substantial increases in property value for a property with trees compared to a similar property without trees. A single mature tree on a valuable property may add thousands of dollars to the value of that property. So whether you look at trees as a property owner or as a developer, there are tremendous advantages to having good trees.

Unfortunately, many of the things we do conflict with the trees' needs. In the process of building, we damage existing trees by compacting or backfilling soil over root systems, cutting through root systems when trenching for utilities, scraping tree trunks with machinery, and in many other ways damaging trees. Much of this damage has a delayed effect on the life of the tree. By the time the tree begins to decline, we have forgotten about the original damage and try to blame the problem on insects or disease.

To make matters worse, we often plant the wrong trees in the wrong places. Oaks, maples, and other large trees grow into power lines because we don't think about the mature height of trees when we plant them. Roots of certain species get into drain tiles and sewer lines. Some trees are susceptible to wind damage or the stresses of life in urban and suburban settings.

Speakers include specialists in horticulture and landscape contracting from Penn State University as well as experienced landscape architects from private business. They will talk about the economic as well as aesthetic contributions that trees made to property value, preserving trees in a development situation, preparing to plant trees, and where to go for more help when planning a street tree program.

For more information and a program, contact Penn State Extension, Westmoreland County, at (412) 837-1402 or the Westmoreland Conservation District at (412) 837-5271. Cost is $15 per person, including buffet lunch. Preregister by Friday, November 8.

Louisville Features First Limousin National

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — For the first time in its history, the National Limousin Show and Sale will be held November 18-21 in conjunction with the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE) in Louisville, Kentucky.

With 403 entries for the show - the second most entries of any breed show in Louisville - the Limousin National promises to be the largest Limousin show ever held in Louisville. Last year, 155 Limousin showed there.

"The number of entries for the show underscore the fact the Southeastern and Eastern parts of the U.S. have become full-fledged leaders in the Limousin breed," said Alan Sears, director of special activities for the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF).

Sears explains the NALF Board decided to alternate the Limousin National between the NAILE and the National Western Stock Show in Denver because of the phenomenal breed growth in these regions of the country.

Sears said, "By alternating the show to Louisville, cattlemen will have the chance to participate in a National Limousin event, who might not otherwise have the chance."

Dr. John Edwards of Texas A&M University will serve as judge for the open Limousin show November 21. The Limousin National is a major point show in the breed's Medal of Excellence Show Program.

The junior Limousin show will be November 17 and the National Limousin Sale will be November 20.

Cawley Is Name Of New Ag Headquarters

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Governor William Donald Schaefer announced Board of public Works approval to name the Maryland Department of Agriculture headquarters building in Annapolis after retiring Secretary of Agriculture Wayne A. Cawley, Jr.

Chaired by the governor, the Board of Public Works also is comprised of Comptroller Louis L. Goldstein and Treasurer Lucille Maurer. The board is authorized by the General Assembly to approve major construction and consultant contracts, equipment purchases, property transactions, and other procurement actions.

"The naming of the agriculture headquarters after Secretary Cawley is an appropriate way to mark his retirement this month after more than 12 years on the cabinet. He has done an outstanding job of representing agriculture and Maryland," Governor Schaefer said.

Governor Schaefer originally made the announcement to name the building after Cawley during the recent dedication of the new Governor's Agricultural Hall of Fame and the new laboratory wing of the Maryland Department of Agriculture.

"This farmer is humbled by the Board of Public Works decision. I liek to think that by honoring me in this unique and significant manner, you are also honoring my wife Barbara and family, the employees of the Department of Agriculture and farmers throughout Maryland. Without their support, I could not have been able to serve as Secretary of Agriculture," Cawley said.

Cawley became Maryland's second agriculture secretary in 1979. He will be succeeded by his current deputy Robert L. Walker on November 1.

Two Complete FmHA Training

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Michael R. Orendo, county supervisor, and Bernard Lynn, Jr., assistant county supervisor with the Farmers Home Administration recently completed the "credit and financial anaylsis" training course sponsored by the FmHA.

The training course is designed to help FmHA personnel improve their skills in understanding financial statements, analyzing financial information from FmHA borrowers and guaranteed lenders, and using this information in the credit process.

The week-long course provides in-depth training in farm financial analysis techniques, much of it done through actual case studies.

As supervisors, Orendo and Linn make and service a variety of farm loans provided by FmHA in Dauphin and Lebanon counties.

Approximately 100 FmHA employees from nearby towns attended the training conference, which was held in St. Louis, Mo. FmHA plans to present the course to nearly 5,000 employees nationwide.

"Each person who attends this course obtains increased knowledge and skills to provide better supervisory assistance to FmHA borrowers," D. Eugene Gayman, state director, said. "Our agency is dedicated to helping farm families reach their goals and objectives. Orendo and Linn are now prepared to serve our constituents better."

Orendo and Linn serve Dauphin and Lebanon counties from the FmHA office located at 2120 Cornwall Road, Suite #4, Lebanon, PA 17042-9787, (717) 274-2879.

4-H Capons Need Fall Care

Herbert C. Jordan
Associate Professor
Poultry Science
Penn State University

The last 40 days before marketing a capon is a critical time. Be careful to care for capons well.

Here are some husbandry tips to improve live bird health, increase carcass quality, and help net income.

Stop thinking science exclusively and start practicing husbandry. Husbandry teaches the grower to not allow any mortality. If it happens, it happens, but plan for, work toward, and attempt zero mortality.

Husbandry is an art that teaches young capon growers to do the following:

• Do not allow capons to become obese or have excess fat on them. Handle 30 birds and feel the fat on the abdomen and make a judgment. A trim capon will live healthier and longer. Husbandry works for super health and a trim, meaty bird is healthy.

• Place one handful of granite or insoluble grit on top of fresh feed for every 25 birds every Monday morning. Husbandry observes that grit improves digestion and feed use.

• Allow capons outside to pasture green grass or clover. This is only for capons with normal beaks. Husbandry teaches no surgery on beaks if capons are to range naturally.

• Give birds fresh cool water that is not dirty or polluted. Husbandry teaches that fresh air, pure water, and quality feed is a must for capons every day.

• Keep birds' environment between 56°F and 80°F. Environmental conditions above 80°F and above 80 percent relative humidity can cause capons to begin to suffer or die. Below 56°F, capons eat too much feed to be profitable. This is observed by experienced growers.

• Feed only high quality turkey grower feed to capons before market. Ten to 20 percent of the total feed can be whole clean oats mixed into feed which helps capons grow meat, firm skin that does not tear and it keeps fat on carcass to a normal amount.

• Examine skin, breast for bruises, and feet weekly. Never allow capons to be injured during the last 40 days of life. Husbandry teaches us to pick up hirds to examine them.

• When red-headed slips or cockerels show up 40 or more days before market, catch all slips and cockerels and put them in a pen away from capons. Husbandry teaches us to protect capons from all other livestock.

• Husbandry, shepherding, animal care, and judging are all part of the art of agriculture. Art may use the results of research, but art is not science. Art is the application of knowledge or wisdom gained from experience, intuition, or a human's ability to perform evaluation.

Lebanon Recognizes 4-H Dairy Members

ANNVILLE (Lebanon Co.) — Outstanding members of the Lebanon County 4-H Dairy Club were recognized recently for their past year achievements.

The recognition was done during the group's annual banquet at the United Christian Church Camp in Annville.

The banquet was sponsored by one of the county's local dairy clubs, NoSoAnn 4-H Dairy Club. Matt Hoover was host to the 175 county club members, leaders and guests.

Tom Hostetter and Krendra Mase led the Pledge of Allegiance and the 4-H Pledge, while Kraig Sellers gave the invocation.

Karen Lentz, county dairy princess, talked about the relationship between her 4-H dairy club involvement and its benefit in promoting the dairy industry. She also told the group that much of the promotion needs to be done by them.

In addition to the awards, all members, leaders and sponsors were given a handcrafted memento for the past year from the secretaries of all the clubs. The secretaries were Jennifer Bashore, Allison Martin, karen Heilinger and Jeff Zimmerman.

John Bomgardner and Alan Hostetter, coaches of the county's dairy judging teams, presented awards to the team members.

4-H Horse Bowl Team Prepares For Nationals

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — 4-horse project members from Lebanon County are competing at the Eastern National 4-H Round-up, this weekend in Louisville, Ky.

The 4-H'ers will be quizzed on their knowledge of horses, horsemanship, and the horse industry. Members race to be the first to sound a buzzer which gives them the opportunity to answer questions related to many diverse aspects of the horse industry.

Selected as state champions in August, the Lebanon County 4-H horse bowl team will compete against 23 other state delegations. Team members include Michelle Slaybaugh, Annville; Amanda Wineske, Jonestown; Nancy Jesiolowski, Lebanon; Dawn Bragg, Jonestown; and alternate Stacie Stoudt, Annville. The team is coached by Linda Slaybaugh, 4-H leader of the Saddle-Lites 4-H Club.

The contest is part of the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE), which features many livestock related competitions during November. The competition will be held at the Kentucky Fair and Exposition Center. The 4-H'ers also plan to tour the Kentucky Derby Museum and the Kentucky Horse Park.

The trip is being funded by Pennsylvania Friends of 4-H, Pennsylvania Livestock Association, and the Lebanon County 4-H Development Fund. • •

EC Plan Inadequate, Say Soybean Farmers

WASHINGTON, D.C. — U.S. soybean farmers are dissatisfied with the European Community's recent attempt to comply with a December 1989 GATT panel ruling that found the current EC oilseed regime illegal.

The plan, slightly modified from the plan initially proposed this summer, was approved recently by the EC Council of Agricultural Ministers, despite objections to the plan from the U.S. government.

"The EC's original proposal was unacceptable to U.S. soybean farmers because it merely continues the excessive oilseed subsidies of the past," said American Soybean Association President Gary Riedel. "Now, the Council of Ministers has taken a plan that does not address the nullification and impairment issue and potentially make it worse."

In addition to continuing subsidies to EC oilseed producers at a minimum of twice the world price, the EC plan now provides payments for the second crop in double cropping and gives countries the option of basing payments on the higher of oilseed yields or cereal yields. In addition, Riedel said, some components of the plan cannot yet be evaluated because of the vagueness of the language in the plan.

In December 1987, ASA filed a Section 301 Unfair Trade Petition charging that the EC has impaired the duty-free commitment for soybeans and soybean meal by offering luctarive subsidies to growers and processors of EC-origin oilseeds.

Following the formal adoption of the GATT panel ruling in January 1990, EC authorities committed to implementation of the report starting with the 1991 crop. Their recently approved plan would not take affect until the 1992 crop and, according to ASA, fails to meet the EC's obligations under the GATT panel ruling.

"We share the opinion of the U.S. Trade Representative and the U.S. Department of Agriculture that the plan as approved is inadequate and clearly does not comply with the GATT panel ruling," Riedel said. "We are looking for immediate action on the part of the U.S. government to force the EC to take meaningful action to reform their oilseeds program."

Riedel said congressional resolutions were introduced in both the Senate and the House of Representatives urging the U.S. trade representative to take action to compensate for the trade looses caused by the EC's failure to comply with the GATT panel ruling. Already, 28 senators and 20 representatives are cosponsoring the resolutions.

Doebler's 1992 silo fillers

HERE'S WHAT OUR SILAGE TRIALS TELL US.

by Bill Camerer

There's no guessing about our silage hybrids. I pull forage wagons up on four digital platform scales to get harvest weights, photo right, then take random samples of silage for lab tests, above.

This is our fourth year testing corn silage hybrids, and it's lonely out there. To the best of our knowledge, Doebler's is the only Eastern seed company testing and ranking silage hybrids.

Our farm trials this year were scattered from Lewis County, New York to Highland County, Virginia. Each silage hybrid was weighed immediately at harvest, and the silage tested by an independent lab.

After four years a pattern is developing.

1. The same hybrids are consistently near the top.

2. Tonnage leaders are also protein and TDN leaders.

3. Silage quality varies dramatically from year to year and field to field.

Watch out 75XMod, here comes 75XMod II

75XMod II is new for '92 and great for silage where its 113-day maturity fits. Vigorous. Broadleafed. Superior blight tolerance. 75XMod chopped 28.1 tons in one 1991 trial. Mod II promises even more. Mod II is a modified 75X and the price is right.

How we rank 'em for 1992

These silage hybrids headed our farm trials year after year. Research indicates they'll do it for you in '92.

Late maturity
Doebler's 944-3 way, 125 days. Huge ears, rank growth. Yield leader past two years....84XP, big tons, big protein yields.

Medium late
Doebler 75XMOD, 113 days. Led pack 1988, 89, 90....75X, 113 days. Always among leaders for tons, protein, TDN.

Medium maturity
Doebler 66XP, 103 days, 1990 best for tonnage, protein, TDN. But give 650A-3 way four stars. 67X and 65X close.

Medium early
Take your pick. New 61X, 101 days or dependable 59X, 98 days. 61X gives you more TDN, less broken stalks than 65X.

Early maturity
Super single 45XP, 92 days. It heads our list but not by much. Also leaders 370A-3 way, 35XP and 29XA.

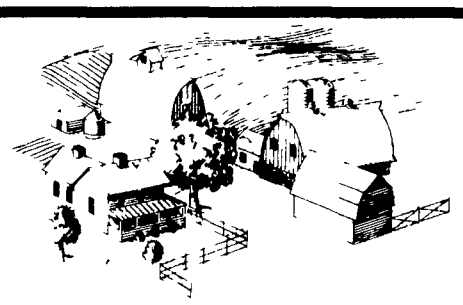
FARM MANAGEMENT



LUTHER SMITH
Multicounty Farm
Management Agent

This is the first of a three-part series on farm planning, focusing on the use of farm budgets in the planning process.

Farm Planning and Budgets

Because of rapidly changing production and economic conditions, managing a profitable farm business has become very challenging, especially when something unforeseen comes along like a drought.

Good managers are always looking for ways to improve their business, but where do you start to look and how can you get a better handle on what's happening? That is where planning and the use of farm budgets comes into play.

Planning

Planning is a way we try to prepare ourselves for what is going to happen in the future. In order to make realistic plans for your operation, you must know the amount and value of the four parts of production. These four parts of production are:

- Capital - the amount of money that is and can be made available from present cash on hand, borrowing or selling assets.
- Labor - family and non-family.
- Land - owned and rented.
- Management - the farmers skills and knowledge.

In other words, you need to inventory everything you presently have available. This gives you a starting point for making plans. Once you know what you have and where you are, you can make plans for where you want to go and how to get there. Planning gives you a road map to achieve your goals.

Budgeting

A farm budget is a plan for saving and/or spending money. It is a very simple and useful tool for doing farm business planning. Some people carry their farm budgets in their heads, but in today's complex economy, any serious budget should be committed to paper so it can be followed and reviewed. It also makes it easier to consider all factors that might affect your operation, knowing that every farm is different.

The following are very important questions that each farmer must answer that relate to the four factors of production when developing farm budgets:

- What is the best use of my assets?
- What crops can be grown and how much of each?
- What livestock enterprises would be feasible for my farming situation and which am I capable of managing?
- What capital is available?
- What labor is needed?
- What management and production practices should be used?

Why Budget?

If you were affected by the drought this year, you might be thinking, "if I had prepared budgets and planned for this year's cropping program, it would not have mattered because the drought hit me and I can't predict the weather."

You're right none of us can perfectly predict the weather, but that does not matter. A good budget will be based on a "typical" (average) year's production, keeping in mind your goals for the farm and will also consider what should be done if yields for a crop budget are reduced due to an unexpected challenge, such as a drought. There are many reasons for doing budgets:

- Budgeting is an excellent way to organize your farm business.
- Budgeting allows you to plan when and how much credit you will need from a lending agency.
- Budgeting allows you to experiment with possible cropping and/or livestock programs before committing any resources to a change.
- Budgeting exposes cost and income items that might otherwise be overlooked.
- Budgeting allows you to plan for the useful life of an asset.
- Budgeting allows you to refine an operation, even if everything seems to be running efficiently.

Limitations of Budgets

The information above tells you why you should be using farm budgets, but there are some limitations to the process. Budgeting will not solve all your problems or give you a definite, no-risk answer, but it will help you organize your information to make sound business decisions.

Budgeting is based on historical information and uses estimates about future factors of production, such as price and yields. The reason for budgeting is to show what is going to happen in the future, and anytime you try to predict the future there is always some risk involved.

It takes time to collect the needed information and time tends to be a precious commodity. That is why a good recordkeeping system is very important.

A common mistake is to overestimate income and underestimate costs, resulting in a falsely optimistic picture. Another area to be careful is when estimating production (yields). This is easily done if crop or livestock records are not accurate. It is best to use historical data from your farm, and if it is a new enterprise, then collect data from several reliable sources to determine your estimates.

Next week, part two will look at some basic economic principles associated with budgets and the steps involved in creating farm budgets. Contact your county Penn State extension office for more information on farm planning and budgeting.

PennWest Reports Strong Earnings

MERCER (Mercer Co.)— PennWest Farm Credit, ACA (Agriculture Credit Association), reported strong earnings for the first three quarters of 1991 and a record high loan volume.

Third quarter earnings of $383,000 brought year-to-date net income to $1.3 million. In 1990, third quarter to-date earnings were $971,000.

Loan volume rose to a record high of $316.2 million, an increase of $15.9 million or 5.3 percent above year-end 1990.

It is anticipated that the favorable nine-month financial trend will continue for the remainder of the year. The impact of the summer's drought and the slow general economy on the area's farmers is being monitored closely with PennWest taking a proactive approach to meeting members' needs.

CASTRATION STRATEGY FOR STARTING DAIRY-BEEF CALVES

One of the emerging beef industries in Pennsylvania and the Northeast is starting young Holstein bull calves for dairy-beef production.

The number of these calves being shipped from the region to feedlots around the country is growing steadily, and may approach 50,000 head this year.

The production of these calves starts at purchase of calves from three to five days of age. They are raised in conventional veal facilities for about seven weeks and then shifted to group pens until they are about 20 weeks old and weigh about 350 pounds. At that time, they are shipped to feedlots around the country.

The so-called "stage one" calf is that calf started on milk replacer at a few days of age and then shifted to a whole-grain diet at about five weeks of age. Unlike the traditional veal calf, the stage one calf must be castrated to be marketed as a feeder steer.

Many growers of stage one calves have castrated the calves using a rubber band placed above the testicles at about five weeks of age. Some will subsequently remove the entire scrotum below the band at about seven weeks of age.

There have been problems with this procedure, primarily the failure to completely eliminate the testicle. The result is bulls and stags that appear in the feedlots after they reach about 600 pounds.

In one study completed here at Penn State, we encountered this problem in Holstein steers purchased from these growers. We have conducted some field studies with the cooperation of a grower in northern Pennsylvania, and have also seen the failure of the rubber band to castrate 100 percent of the calves.

In this field study we looked at three methods of castration: surgical removal of the testicles after two weeks in stage one, surgical removal of the testicles after five weeks in stage one, and banding of the calves at five weeks and removal of the scrotum at seven weeks.

Our results thus far have shown there was no effect on performance of the calves and no incidence of infection at the castration site for surgical castration at either time. Further, there was a 11.5 percent incidence of bulls and/or stags with the banding procedure.

These results would indicate there is no problem associated with the surgical castrations, and there is no chance of bulls or stags in the feedlot. This has tremendous economic importance. Our own experience in trying to sell a 600-pound Holstein stag was they were not worth very much. In addition, the removal of the testicles after two weeks has little effect on the calf. The testicles and associated tissues are poorly developed and the calves heal quickly. The grower we worked with indicated there was no reduction in feed intake or other signs of stress imposed by the castration.

The process itself is fairly simple and easy to learn. In fact, the traditional beef cow-calf producer usually uses this method as part of a normal management scheme. As with any other practice that has the potential to stress the calf, the grower must use good management sense in using antiseptic treatments on the wound, controlling flies, and not trying to castrate calves already heavily stressed by sickness or other factors.

Don't Try To Stretch It Too Far

The drought-induced shortage of feed this winter already has many beef producers scrambling to find some alternative methods of feeding.

There are a couple of things that should be remembered when making decisions about non-traditional feeding methods.

First, don't try to stretch the feed resources too far. It is a little like the proverbial rubber band — it can break. Feed shortages will reduce calving rate, milk production, and, most importantly, reduce the number of cows that can be rebred for 1992 calves.

It is the same story you have heard from here before — know what the requirements of the cows are (based on weight and stage of pregnancy or lactation) and what the nutritive value of the feed actually is that you have (from a forage analysis.) With this information in hand, contact your county agent and we will work together to see what the appropriate feeding program should be.

Secondly, the major nutritional deficiency in a beef cow in the winter is energy, not protein. Beef cows will do just fine on rations that are around 10 percent crude protein until they calve. Most decent hay and some drought silage will provide all the protein that is needed.

The key is what the energy value of the feed is. The most cost-effective energy supplement is usually plain, whole, shelled corn. There is no need to grind it, add oats to it, add molasses to it, or have it analysed. Just be sure it isn't moldy.

If corn is not available or seems costly, compare the energy value (not the price per ton!) with another feed. A feeder told me recently wheat middles are a good energy value right now in some areas. Again, contact your county agent to help make those comparisons.

84 Limousin At American Royal

ENGLEWOOD, Colo.— When the American Royal makes its annual November arrival in Kansas City, the Limousin breed will host one of its major point shows for the Limousin Medal of Excellence competition.

Although the 84 entries for the show may not sound like a lot for a major point show, Alan Sears, director of special activities for the North American Limousin Foundation (NALF), said, "Given the fact that the Limousin National is being held in Louisville less than a week later with over 400 Limousin entries, we're happy to have so many signed up for the American Royal."

Limousin activities at the Royal will take place November 12-16. The junior Limousin show will be at 4 p.m. November 15 and the open show will be at noon November 16.

Tom Stewman of Maryneal, Texas, will serve as judge for the open Limousin show in Kansas City. Stewman also serves as vice-president of the NALF Board.

WHY IS IT SO HARD TO EXPORT EGGS?

Milton E. Madison
Assistant Professor
Agricultural Economics

Egg marketing has become a difficult task in this country. Cholesterol concerns, changes in family eating habits, and Salmonella enteritidis have all contributed to reductions in average egg consumption per person. One alternative market for eggs would be to export them to other countries. This has not proved to be a very easy way to market eggs.

In 1990, about two percent of egg production was exported. Peak exports were in 1981 when four percent of production was exported. The egg producing sector of the U.S. poultry industry is very efficient and should be able to compete well on world markets in terms of cost of eggs produced.

"An Overview of International Egg Production and Trade," in the July 1991 issue of USDA's "Livestock and Poultry Situation and Outlook Report," gives some insight into why eggs do not have a booming export market.

World egg production during 1986-1990 averaged 43.7 billion dozen with 1.5 billion dozen (3.4 percent) being exported. The leading egg-producing countries were China (25 percent), USSR (16 percent), EEC (16 percent), U.S. (13 percent), Japan (8 percent), and Mexico (3 percent). Most eggs are consumed close to where they are produced. The leading egg exporting countries were The Netherlands (44 percent), China (10 percent), Belgium-Luxembourg (8 percent), U.S. (7 percent), and West Germany (6 percent).

Almost half of the eggs traded in the world are between members of the EEC. West Germany is listed as a major exporting country but also is the leading egg importing country. The Netherlands, the leading exporting country, exports three-fourths of its production, mostly to other EEC countries.

Why do eggs not trade more freely? Various countries use import levies, tariffs, state trading and licensing, quotas, and virtual bans to keep foreign eggs out of domestic markets. The United States has a 3.5 cent per dozen tariff on egg imports from most countries. The Caribbean Basin and Israel are exempt, while the Free Trade Agreement with Canada established a 2.8 cent tariff for 1990.

The EEC uses variable import levies to keep eggs from being imported. The import levies vary with world grain prices, feed conversion ratios, and transportation costs. Imports can also be suspended if the EEC market is threatened with serious disturbances.

Some countries have seen egg production as a way to generate exportable products with low investment. Turkey has just recently become a large exporter of eggs to the Middle East. The record level of exports for the U.S. in 1981 were the result of large shipments to the Middle East. Hong Kong imports nine percent of all eggs, mostly from China. Ninety percent of China's and Thailand's exports go to Hong Kong.

Most egg trading appears to take place between countries that are close together. One exception is Japan. The Japanese market is shared by the EEC (40 percent), U.S. (20 percent), Brazil, and Canada. The U.S. has been losing share to the EEC because of price competition. EEC subsidies in 1990 amounted to about 15 percent of the cost of delivered product.

Egg production is increasing in many non-industrial countries. Egg consumption is declining in many industrialized countries. This brings together two opposing forces for egg exporters — declining demand for egg imports and increasing numbers of competitors for export markets. It appears that egg exporting will remain a difficult way to market eggs.

Announce Forage Results

TULPEHOCKEN (Berks Co.)— Twenty samples of forage were collected from Tulpehocken Young Farmers representing a variety of cuttings and storage facilities.

These samples were chemically analyzed to determine their nutrient content. Utilizing the samples of forage, the following items were used to rank entries: stage of maturity, leafiness, foreign material, condition and odor and green color. The chemical analysis provided data on neutral detergent and acid detergent fiber values.

Following are the placings for the quality (appearance) contest: Haylage- first, John Stump; second, Frederick Bohn; and third, Clyde Loump.

In the hay category, John Stump placed first; second George Moyer; and third, Skyline Acres-John Hix.

Proper lime application can increase your dry weather yield

You can't control the weather, but you can increase your dry weather yield by controlling soil fertility with proper lime application. Fall and early winter lime application corrects soil pH, restores vital nutrients, and makes your fertilizer more effective in preparation for spring planting.

Schedules Forestry Seminar

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Woodland owners and others interested in forest and wildlife management will have an opportunity to increase their knowledge of the subject at the first Central Maryland Forestry Stewardship Seminar on November 23.

The seminar, which will be held at Southhampton Middle School on Moores Mill Road in Bel Air (Harford County), is sponsored by the cooperative Extension Service and the Maryland Institute for Agriculture and Natural Resources in cooperation with other state and private natural resource agencies and organizations. MIANR is one of three research and public service institutions of the University of Maryland System.

"In order to enhance forest resources for wildlife, timber, recreation, water quality, aesthetics and other benefits, landowners must make knowledgeable decisions based on sound information," said Jonathan Kays, an Extension natural resources specialist. "Seminar organizers have worked hard to develop a program that will provide participants with this information."

Following registration from 8:30 - 9 a.m. and opening remarks by Harford County Agricultural Extension Agent Robert Halman, keynote speaker Lloyd Casey, rural forest management specialist for the USDA Forest Service, will discuss "Stewardship and the Family Forest." Presentations will follow on:

- Maryland's Forest Resources: Past, Present, Future.
- Basics of Forest Ecology and Management.
- Developing a Resource Management Plan.
- Harvesting to Meet Your Stewardship Objectives.

After lunch, participants can attend two of four workshops that focus on such topics as marketing forest products and managing private woodlands for endangered species.

The program will end with a discussion on where to get help in accomplishing forestry stewardship objectives.

Advance registration for the seminar is required by November 13. The $7 fee covers lunch and educational materials.

For more information, contact Robert Halman, Harford County Cooperative Extension Office, P.O. Box 663, Forest Hill, MD 21050. (301) 838-6000.

Slit-Tillers Better For Soil

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — The Lancaster County Conservation District now has two slit-tillerls available free of charge for five acres of use.

If you like the job that it does, it may be used for more than five acres by paying a maintenance charge of $2.50 per acre.

A two-toothed model is available, which can be horse-drawn or pulled by a small tractor, and a five-toothed model for larger tractors.

Slit tillage has been developed by Herb Myer, a board member of the Conservation District, who has used the practice since 1966.

Silt-tillage is similar to chisel plowing. However, the teeth are 30 inches on center, so that less of the soil is disturbed.

If done in the fall, it will reduce erosion and break up hard pan. It will also increase the soil's ability to absorb water.

The Lancaster Co. Conservation District has two slit-tillers available free of charge for five acres of use.

In the spring, disking before planting should be minimized to reduce crusting and maintain greater infiltration.

If you would like to use the slit-tiller or have any questions, contact Eric Ashley at the Lancaster County Conservation District office at (717) 299-5361.

Gehl SB3250 Rectangular Baler

Gehl Expands Hay Tool Line With Balers

WEST BEND, Wis. — Gehl Company is adding two rectangular balers to its extensive offering of hay equipment. The new baler models SB3210 and SB3250 make standard 14-by-18-inch bales.

"These rectangular balers expand the Gehl haytool lineup," said Jim Phillips, Gehl product development manager for haytools. "With two new disc mower conditioners, four sicklebar mower conditioners, disc mowers, three types of rakes, both fixed and variable-chamber round balers and now rectangular balers, Gehl delivers an unmatched haytool offering."

The Gehl rectangular balers feature a simple, dependable Suretie knotter.

"This knotter has 30 percent fewer parts than competitive models," said Phillips. "That means more reliability and tight, sure ties, bale after bale."

The Suretie knotter ties a durable, "bow tie knot" which is stronger than conventional knots. It will use either sisal or plastic twine without time-consuming adjustments.

A hydraulic bale thrower, optional on the Gehl rectangular balers, features a self-contained hydraulic system for proper operation regardless of tractor hydraulic capacity. Electric controls mount in the tractor cab for precise bale thrower operation.

Additional standard features on both balers include:

- Large storage capacity for six balls of twine.
- Wide hay pickups with closely spaced tines and a gauge wheel to follow the contours of the field and bring in all the crop.
- Bale tension that's easily adjusted with two handles.
- Self-aligning plunger system for reduced wear in the bale chamber.

DowElanco, DuPont Announce Agreement

WILMINGTON, Del. — DowElanco and Du Pont Agricultural Products recently announced a copromotion agreement regarding selected soybean products for the 1992 growing season.

"The copromotion effort includes a wide range of reliable, dependable products to meet the complete grass and broadleaf weed control needs of U.S. soybean growers," said Greg Warren, DowElanco group product manager.

"Copromotion also will provide growers with the best weed and grass control available for less cost than before," said Philip Neff, Du Pont soybean product manager.

The copromotion provides for grower incentives for using specific DuPont and DowElanco herbicides on the same acre. The offerings are designed to provide soybean growers with the tools they need to achieve yield goals and profitability targets.

Products involved in the 1992 copromotion efforts include Du Pony Canopy®, Preview®, Classic® and Pinnacle® herbicides and Treflan® and Sonalan® from DowElanco.

NEW YORK, N.Y. — Production and management techniques that can improve the health of swine herds and increase producer profits were the main focus of the Pfizer Swine Semiars, held recently in Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, and Iowa.

The five one-day meetings were sponsored by Pfizer Animal Health for the second consecutive year. This year's sessions were attended by more than 500 pork producers, feed salemen, veterinarians, and consultants. They were held in LaSalle/Peru and Jacksonville, Ill., Indianapolis, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Laurie, Miss.

In an overview of the world pork situation, Peter Chattin, a senior market research analyst for Pfizer, possibly summed up best the overall message of the sessions.

"In the short run, producers should be encouraged to adopt the new production techniques that fit the current facilities," he said. "In the long run, producers need to adapt their facilities so as to maximize their ability to use these new techniques.

"Swine production is becoming more sophisticated throughout the world. If U.S. hog producers want to increase our market share worldwide, they must take advantage of the tools available to create a high-quality product that is profitable and fits the consumer's needs."

To increase efficiency, producers were also advised by several speakers to incorporate extensive record-keeping and analysis into their management systems.

"There is a wide variation in the efficiency and cost of production among swine operations," said Dr. Larry Rueff, a swine veterinarian and consultant from Greensburg, Ind., who spoke at the session in Indianapolis. "Records allow the producer to establish benchmarks to evaluate changes in the operation."

Other consulting veterinarians who spoke at the meetings encouraged greater use of diagnostic evaluations and slaughter checks.

"By using routine diagnostic evaluations and slaughyer checks, we can keep track of disease patterns in a herd and help producers determine what diseases are present and their significance to the operation," Dr. Patrick Graham, a veterinarian from Pittsfield, Ill., told the crowd at the Jacksonville, Ill., meeting.

Dr. Brad Gramm, a Pfizer technical services veterinarian, also emphasized the value of slaughter checks. Referrring to a study recently conducted by the National Animal Health Monitoring System, he demonstrated that respiratory disease and parasite infection

Fast-Exit Stall Provides Great Visibility

The Fast-Exit Herringbone has been added to Westfalia's line of "45" stalls. The Fast-Exit is designed to index cows into milking position, yet permit panicked first-calf heifers the ability to escape. And it provides great visibility for both the dairyman and his cows.

ELK GROVE VILLAGE, Ill. — The Fast-Exit Herringbone has been added to Westfalia's line of "45" stalls.

The fast-exit stall lets all the cows go at once and requires a minimum of working parts. It is designed to index cows into milking position, yet permit panicked first-calf heifers the ability to escape. And it provides great visibility for both the dairyman and his cows.

The Fast-Exit Herringbone is made with 2-3/8 inch O.D. galvanized schedule 40 pipe.

The Fast-Exit stall also comes with the ability to index all cows into their optimum milking position. When the stall is in the indexing mode, the herringbone-shaped breast rail gently nudges stubborn cows into the proper position.

The Fast-Exit stall can fit in an existing structure with a ceiling of 8 feet. Fast-Exit stalls are considered among the most efficient stalls permitting excellent cow flow through the parlor.

Case IH Introduces Large Tractor

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — The new Case International 7150 MAGNUM tractor from Case IH offers more horsepower and more three-point hitch capacity than any other Mechanical Front Drive (MFD) tractor on the market.

No other MFD tractor can match the 215 PTO horsepower and 14,950 pounds of hitch lift capacity of the 7150, said J.R. "Russ" Green, MAGNUM brand manager.

"It offers all the popular features of the MAGNUM line — such as an 18-speed, full powershift transmission and Mechanical Front Drive — along with several product enhancements all in a larger package," he said.

No other row-crop tractor can match the 7150's 215 PTO horsepower and 14,950 pounds of hitch lift capacity. It offers the popular features of the MAGNUM line, such as an 18-speed powershift transmission and mechanical front drive.

"In developing the 7150, we are responding to changing practices in North American agriculture," Green said. "Farmers today want to perform more operations in fewer passes over the field — planting and fertilizing in a single trip, for example — or operate at faster field speeds with existing equipment. This means a demand for tractors that have greater horsepower, more drawbar pull power and higher three-point hitch lift capacity."

More Power Under The Hood

Product enhancement begins under the tractor's hood. The 7150 is powered by the same field-proven 505-cubic-inch engine as the other models in the MAGNUM line. However, increased PTO horsepower is made possible by a new high-pressure fuel injection pump, wastegate turbocharger, new cylinder head design, and a stronger cam shaft.

A Nippondenso P Type injection pump and higher-capacity injection lines supply fuel to the 7150 engine at higher pressure than other MAGNUM tractors. Longer cylinder head bolts and upgraded head material ensure reliable clamping of the cylinder head at this higher pressure level.

Also, to improve fuel economy, a new low-swirl cylinder head design allows a better fuel-to-air mix for more complete fuel atomization. With this new design, the 7150 provides 20 more horsepower while only consuming about a gallon more fuel per hour than the 7140.

"The wastegate turbocharger allows the 7150 to reach maximum power at 90 percent of rated engine speed, which translates into increased tractor lugging ability for the operator," Green said. At low rpms, the 7150 turbocharger air volume increases to provide superior lugging ability; at higher rpms, the turbocharger output adjusts to maintain the torque rise needed for high performance.

Engine efficiency also is enhanced by a larger radiator designed to handle higher operating temperatures. Ventilated side panels increase the amount of air flow available for engine cooling by 40 percent. Dual piston cooling jets ensure uniform cooling of pistons and longer ring-to-liner life.

Greater Lift Capacity

To allow the operator to take full advantage of higher horsepower, greater hitch lift capacity has been built into the 7150 MAGNUM tractor. The standard Category III three-point hitch features lift cylinders that measure 2.25 inches in diameter and deliver 14,950 pounds of lift capacity — 2,000 pounds more than the 7140 and more than any other MFD tractor. (These capacities are calculated at 24 inches behind the lift points, according to Society of Automotive Engineers standards.)

A quick-hitch coupler for easier implement coupling is also standard on the 7150.

The 7150 tractor uses the improved MAGNUM hydraulic system that operates with high efficiency, using only the minimum horsepower required to supply additional hydraulic flow when needed. The system employs a dual pump assembly with 24 and 36 GPM pumps.

Mechanical front drive standard

An MFD front axle is standard on the 7150. Like the MFD option on the 7130 and 7140 tractors, it provides better traction, crop clearance, and maneuverability, and can be engaged on the go.

Front axle tread adjustment ranges from 60 to 95 inches. With a load rating of 10,000 lbs., the front axle can carry plenty of ballast for traction and stability. The rear axle is 120 inches long and 4 inches in diameter and provides tread settings from 60 to 136 inches.

"Lift capacity, higher horsepower, and row-crop tread settings make the 7150 an ideal tractor for row-crop as well as many other applications," Green said. "And, like the entire MAGNUM line, the 5100 Series MAXXUM™ tractors and the Case International 9200 Series four-wheel drive tractors, the 7150 is covered by our exclusive 5-year/5,000-hour warranty."

are much more prevalent than previously thought and are still among the most common problems found in hogs. According to the survey, slaughter checks on 3,867 head from 139 herds revealed that 100 percent of the herds were infected with enzootic pneumonia and 54 percent had roundworm infection.

Gram pointed out that respiratory diseases are often initiated or intensified due to tissue damage caused by the migrating larvae of roundworms.

"This subclinical parasitism is responsible for a high percentage of the dollar loss associated with parasite infections," he said. "If we can reduce or eliminate the lung and liver damage in young pigs caused by migrating roundworm larvae, we can dramatically improve the health and performance of those hogs in the growing and finishing stages."

He then went on to discuss various anthelmintic options available to producers, emphasizing using the right product at the right time to fit the management program.

NFO Takes Initiative To Reverse Hog Prices

AMES, Iowa — To head off further erosion in hog prices the National Farmers Organization (NFO) is initiating Cull Sow and Boar Block Sales, beginning November 1 in Nebraska, Iowa, and Minnesota. Sales will be twice a week with delivery dates to be announced later.

"At current prices, America's pork producers are experiencing a loss of $64,800,000 in income per week compared to what they earned on August 1," said DeVon Woodland, NFO president.

"On August 1, average hog price was $56 per hundredweight. In late-October that price is $41. That $15 per hundred drop in price represents $36 per head on a 240-pound hog," Woodland said. "Considering a weekly hog kill of 1.8-million head, that translates into a $64,800,000 loss of income for farmers and rural communities."

"This is a dire situation," he said. "Neither family farmers nor rural communities can sustain those income losses for very long. Such low prices are a recipe for accelerated expulsion from the land for farmers and accelerated economic decline for communities. Furthermore, such low prices open the door for corporate hog production entities to gain near monopolistic control of the nation's pork production. That's not good for either consumers of farmers."

According to Woodland, the drop in hog prices has stimulated another negative trend. In the past 30 days, in an effort to make up for lost income, hog producers have carried their hogs to heavier weights — averagig five pounds per head.

"That extra tonnage of pork from those few pounds is the equivalent of an extra 45,000 head of hogs per week. That extra pork on the market compounds the problem and makes it more difficult to reverse the price slide," he said.

"That's why NFO is launching its Cull Sow and Boar Block Sale Program," Woodland said. "It's imperative that farmers reduce pork production. The place to start is with the breeding herd — the sows and boars. Reducing their inventory now means lower pork production and higher prices next spring and summer."

The NFO President notes that the NFO's Cull Sow and Boar Sales Blocks offer hog producers an opportunity to generate greater income from the sale of sows and boars. Rather than considering cull sows and boars as a mere "by-product" of their enterprises undeserving of focused marketing, farmers can turn their cull animals into a "profit center."

"This action will stabilize current market prices because of the volume and consistency of the sales and NFO's skillful collective bargaining," Woodland said. "It's a simple concept that will succeed. It's collective bargaining in a 'pure' form."

Here's how the Cull Sow and Boar Blocks will work. Beginning November 1, the NFO Hog Division will initiate the "block and sell action." The program will begin in Nebraska, Iowa, and Minnesota and will be expanded into other states. Sows and boars from individual producers will be blocked together for a volume sale of at least 500 animals per week per state.

Two sales will be held per week - one on Tuesday and the second on Friday.

For the Tuesday sale, hog numbers will be given to NFO negotiators by Monday. These hogs will be scheduled for delivery to an NFO Livestock Service Center on the following Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday.

For the Friday sales, farmers will turn in their cull sow and boar numbers to NFO negotiators by Thursday. These hogs then will be scheduled for deliver to NFO Livestock Service Centers on the following Monday and Tuesday.

"We invite all pork producers to participate in this program," Woodland said. "It's the best way for them to gain collective market leverage and increase prices."

Conservation Association Recognizes Leaders

ALTOONA (Blair Co.) — Richard C. Waybright of Gettysburg, Adams County, was recently awarded the 1991 Conservation Farmer of the Year Award by the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

At an awards ceremony here recently, more than 300 conservation leaders from throughout the state observed the recognition of individuals and organizations who have excelled in grassroots efforts to conserve Pennsylvania's natural resources.

Waybright's management of his 1980-acre Mason Dixon Farm was given praise for the innovative and progressive efforts to conserve his soil and protect local waterways from sediment and nutrient pollution.

Managing nutrients from his 1,485 milk cows and 1,300 heifers demands a sophisticated and well-integrated management approach. In 1979, Waybright built an animal anaerobic digester which breaks down raw manure into a much safer waste product. Digested manure has little odor, contains a more stable form of nitrogen that is not lost to the atmosphere, and is alkaline, which means it can be applied to cropland as a source of lime.

Waybright applies the farm's digested manure to crops during the growing season through an irrigation system. He calls this "fertigation," since the digested waste acts as a fertilizer and saves him a lot of money by greatly reducing the need for commercial fertilizer.

Today, the farm's three digester systems produce biogas which, in turn, is used to produce all the electricity for the farms and four homes. Excess electricity is sold to the local power company.

Soil conservation work has also been given high priority. Land that is prone to erode is rotated among alfalfa, grass crops, and corn so as to protect the soil from continuous corn production. Crop crops can easily erode due to the straight rows and lack of ground cover.

Other soil conservation work includes 17 miles of terraces and diversions and 800,000 feet of drain tile. In recognizing the detrimental effects of soil compaction, the Waybrights designed an innovative track forage harvester which disperses the weight of the chopper and trailer.

The Mason Dixon Farms was nominated by the Adams County Conservation District.

Bill Asper of Asperline Homes, Clinton County, was recently awarded the 1991 Special Conservation Service Award by the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

In 1988, Bill Asper began a reforestation program with the Clinton County Conservation District. For every Asperline log home constructed, 100 seedlings are purchased for planting in Clinton or Lycoming counties. Tree planting provides vegetative cover, timber and pulpwood, and wildlife food and habitat.

More than 45,000 tree seedlings have been given to municipalities, organizations, and private landowners for reforestation and environmental improvement. Each year, 1,500 tree seedlings are provided for the county's kindergarten through third graders.

The reforestation program also provides education on proper woodland management through workshops on quality timber cuts, wildlife management, and pest control.

To promote public appreciation of our natural world, Asper has set aside a 30-acre site for a future outdoor learning center. Asper's philosophy is that trees are our future as well as our heritage.

Mark Jackson of Greensburg, Westmoreland County, was recently awarded the 1991 Ann Rudd Saxman Conservation Volunteer Award by the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

The Ann Rudd Saxman Conservation Volunteer Award recognizes outstanding and long-time volunteer service in the field of natural resource conservation. Jackson is the first honoree of this award, which was established by PACD in honor of the late Ann Rudd Saxman, a dedicated conservationist from Westmoreland County.

Jackson was recognized for his volunteer efforts on both the local and state level. As as associate director of the Westmoreland County Conservation District, Jackson has contributed his talents as a graphics artist to the production of the district's award winning newsletter and annual reports.

At the state level, Jackson was instrumental in the creation of a new conservation education magazine entitled "Pennsylvania Resources". "Pennsylvania Resources" is a publication of the Pennsylvania Conservation Partnership, a conservation education program shared by PACD and its member conservation districts. Jackson's vision is one of a growing readership that reflect's a public eagerness to learn more about Pennsylvania's natural environment.

Jackson's conservation ethic extends into this other volunteer work with Boy Scouts of America and the annual Westmoreland County Arts and Heritage Festival.

For more information about the Pennsylvania Conservation Partnership, contact PACD, 225 Pine Street, Harrisburg, PA 17101.

"The Progress" newspaper of Clearfield County was recently awarded the 1991 Conservation Media Award by the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

The Conservation Media Award was created this year to pay tribute to professionals in the communications field who help the public understand the work of conservation districts and natural resource management.

"The Progress" was recognized for its excellent coverage of news and events that involve the Clearfield County Conservation District. A reporter personally attends at least half of the monthly district board meetings and covers special district activities as well.

Important conservation issues are given fair and well-researched coverage, such as a past series of articles on forest clear-cutting, a timber harvesting practice that often comes under fire.

Since 1983, The Progress has contributed to a trust fund established by the conservation district to award more than $1,200 annually in scholarships to high school and college students.

Joseph Beebe of Towanda, Bradford County, was recently awarded the 1991 Maurice K. Goddard Forest Resource Management Award by the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

In honor of former Secretary of Environmental Resources Maurice K. Goddard, the forestry award recognizes private, non-industrial woodland owners who have implemented a written woodland management plan.

Beebe is one of two state winners of this award for 1991. Since the 1960s, Beebe has consciously protected his woodland by following a conservation plan. Forest roads are protected from erosion and wildlife habitats are enhanced through the planting of wildgrape, dogwood trees, and a variety of groundcovers.

Convinced of the value of conservation, he has dedicated his farming enterprise to the production of conservation plant seed, which he sells to conservation districts statewide.

Beebe is a charter member of the Bradford County Forestry Landowners Association and is involved in the American Tree Farm System and Pennsylvania Forestry Association. He has been a cooperator with the Bradford County Conservation District since 1963.

Louie Wigington of Claysville, Washington County, was recently awarded the 1991 Maurice K. Goddard Forest Resource Management Award by the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

Wigington has an insatiable love of trees and has won many accolades over the years for his careful management of his woodlands. He became the first official tree farmer in Washington County in 1969 and the county's first cooperating Forest Conservationist in 1977. Over the years, he has planted 100,000 trees.

Wigington conducts selective harvesting on his woodlot, and any logging on his property is done under an erosion control plan. He is a strong supporter of wildlife management, planting many trees for wildlife purposes and leaving selected dead trees for animal dens.

Seven ponds on his property are protected by natural fences, which feed into watering troughs for his 60 head of cattle. No animals come in direct contact with the watering system.

Wigington permits hunting, fishing, and hiking on his majestic peaceful grounds and opens his farm to groups who wish to learn more about his tree farm system.

In April, Louie Wigington was one of only two national recipients of the National Arbor Day Foundation's Good Steward Award.

The Strawberry Hill Nature Center and Preserve of Fairfield, Adams County, was recently awarded the 1991 Watershed Protection Award by the Pennsylvania Association of Conservation Districts, Inc.

The Strawberry Hill Nature Center and Preserve is a 519-acre natural stream valley in Adams County. Within its woods lies the origin of Swamp Creek. It was here that a couple from Baltimore, Hans and Frances Froelicher, bought a simple cabin in the 1960s. Concerned about the poor water quality of Swamp Creek, the couple purchased surrounding land and began to clean up the waters. Today, the forest and aquatic habitats flourish, and the area has been turned into a model environmental education center.

In 1986, Frances Froelicher established the Strawberry Hill Foundation, a non-profit foundation charged with maintaining the Strawberry Hill Nature Center and Preserve. The center is the only of its kind in the area that teaches land use management as an environmental protection tool.

Programs for adults include guided nature walks, volunteer training, teacher in-service workshops, guest speakers, and special events. Programs for children include field trips, summer day camp, and special seasonal courses.

Froelicher has worked with several state agencies to develop a sound management plan for the Swamp Creek Watershed. The plan addresses issues such as flood and erosion control, water quality protection, and water supply management.

The Nature Center receives no public funding, relying on membership support and financial contributions.

The Adams County Conservation District was responsible for submitting the nomination of the center for this annual award.

The Key To Soil Management Is Fall Fertilizing

Fertrell. FERTILIZER PRODUCTS

FERTRELL BLUE LABEL 1-1-1

Fetrell Blue Label is a multi-nutrient fertilizere used as a soil builder where soil fertility is low, or when nutrient maintenance is needed.

Fertrell Blue Label provides time-released phosphorus and potassium, and since the rock powders are untreated, they contain the secondary nutrients calcium, magnesium and sulfur, as well as many trace minerals.

It is formulated specifically for broadcast application on hay fields, pastures, or as a plow down for corn. Fertrell Blue Label can be used comparably to a 5-10-20 commercial fertilizer.

FERTRELL BLUE K 1-1-2

Fertrell Blue K is an extension of Fertrell Blue Label with an increased potassium level formulated especially for crops requiring high levels of potash, such as alfalfa, corn silage, and vegetables. It is excellent for correcting low potassium soils or where potassium would be the first limiting factor in crop production.

Fertrell Blue K is more convenient and efficient than applying single ingredients. The potash ingredients are not highly leachable, and there is no need to worry about a high salt content The total nutrient value is comparable to a 5-10-30 commercial fertilizer

SURPLUS PAINT LIQUIDATION

We have thousands of gallons of the highest quality, industrial grade paint available as a result of military base closings and cancelled government contracts. All these paints are made to comply with strict federal specifications by manufacturers who mainly supply the industrial markets. Many were designed for extreme duty making them a superior choice for farm applications.

Look over the list below and call for more details. Even though we have shipments coming in regularly, we cannot guarantee what we have today we'll have next month. So, buy now while we have it - most can be stored for several years.

Types Of Paint Available	Uses
Epoxy (2 Part)	Galvanized roofs - block, concrete and wood
Enamels, alkyd	equipment, general use
Zinc chromite	The best primer for galvanized metal - when top coated with epoxy produces longest lasting coating.
Enamel, silicone
Epoxy concrete primer - sealer, clear
Aluminum heat resistant (1200°)

Epoxy $10/Gal.
All Others $6.00/Gal.

A Satisfied Customer...

JOHN R. RODGERS, of Belleville had three styles of fencing installed totaling a mile on his farm John offers these comments. "I looked at others fencers and determined that Beaver Fence Systems had the people that could do a quality job and a quality fence to keep the cattle where I want them. The flexibility of the fence gives me full utilization of the land with maximum efficiency. The job was completed in two days including a barnyard fence, plus 6 and 4 wire pasture fencing."

BREWEX - For Use In Dairy Feeds

BREWEX is used extensively in complete dairy formulations to contribute utilizable energy. It is a price/performance value when used in dry feeds, liquid feeds and on-farm mixes.

MIX WITH DRY FEEDS: BREWEX is found in commercial pelleted rations for dairy, hogs and poultry as an energy source to replace corn. BREWEX replaces corn on a pound for pound dry basis and provides for improved pellet durability, reduced mineral segregation, dust control and improved palatability in dairy rations.

ON-FARM MIXING
A commercial Jersey dairy farm, having over ten years of experience in feeding BREWEX to partially replace corn finds that
- BREWEX replaced 5% to 10% corn/day
- BREWEX improves butterfat about 0.1%
- BREWEX mixed with forage reduces mortality due to displaced abomasum
- BREWEX helps cattle to stay on feeds

Wet brewers grain is more than a good feed. It's a good business ingredient.

Each day, up to 100,000 U.S. dairy cows feed on rations containing wet brewers grain. That's because their owners know it minimizes feed costs while it maximizes production.

Wet brewers grain is a high-protein feed ingredient. It's always fresh, because it's delivered directly to your dairy. It fits into most programs, is easy to handle, and easy to store.

Call us today. One of our professional feed consultants will help you work wet brewers grain into your ration, so you can make it a profitable ingredient for your business.

Regional FFA Members Receive National Recognition

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — National recognition will be given to regional FFA members at the world's largest annual youth convention, the 64th National FFA Convention, to be held here Nov. 14-16. More than 24,000 FFA members, guests, and supporters are expected to attend.

The convention will feature eight sessions with addresses by top speakers from the fields of agriculture, government, and entertainment. A special highlight will be a keynote address by President George Bush on Wednesday, Nov. 13. Others scheduled to appear are Carolyn Suzanne Sapp, 1992 Miss America; Captain Gerald Coffee, former POW during the Vietnam War; Scott McKain, former national FFA secretary; Jack C. Parnall, former deputy secretary of agriculture; Dave Roever, Vietnam War veteran; and Jerry Clower, country comedian.

In addition, convention participants will have opportunities to attend leadership workshops, tour Kansas City manufacturing and agribusiness sites, take in American Royal Livestock Show and Rodeo performances, and meet with fellow FFA members from all 50 states, Guam, the Marshall Islands, Micronesia, the Northern Mariana Islands, Puerto Rico, and the Virgin Islands.

Other highlights will include the selection of top FFA members in 29 agricultural proficiency award areas, 12 national career skill competitions, and both prepared and extemporaneous public speaking contests. The American Star Farmer and American Star in Agribusiness will be named, and 1,105 members will receive the American FFA Degree, the organization's highest degree. Top chapters in safety, community development, and overall chapter activities will also be recognized. In addition, the 1991-1992 national FFA officers will be elected and installed.

The National Agricultural Career Show and the National FFA Alumni Convention are held in conjunction with the FFA convention.

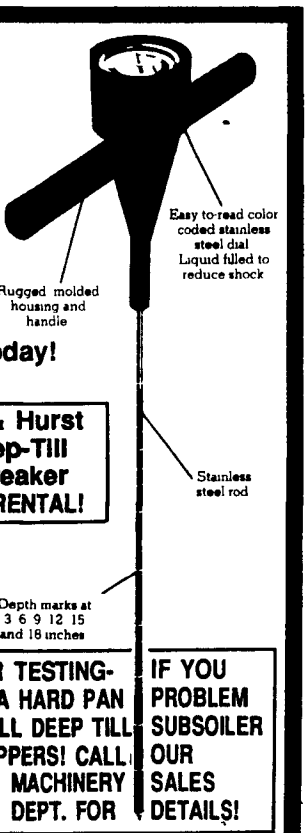
Is soil compaction costing you? Find out fast with a simple, low-cost DICKEY-john Soil Compaction Tester

A simple, easy-to-use management tool that can help you: Increase Yields. Decrease Costs.



Easy to-read color coded stainless steel dial
Liquid filled to reduce shock
Rugged molded housing and handle
Stainless steel rod
Depth marks at 3 6 9 12 15 and 18 inches

The High Cost of Compaction
Soil compaction is becoming a more serious problem in all parts of the country A problem that is very expensive in several ways

- First compacted soils are much harder to work Research in Illinois demonstrated that over 90 percent more power is required to plow severely compacted soil
- Second compacted soil results in poor root and plant development Compacted soil is dense roots cannot grow in it That can reduce yields by 20 30 even 50% or more
- Third compaction severely restricts the manner in which soil naturally manages water Both by holding water near the surface of the field and by limiting the ability of plants to take up water and nutrients from below Excess surface water makes fields difficult to work in the spring and fall And water trapped under the compacted layer reduces plant development and yields especially during dry periods
- Fourth a compacted zone means that the fertilizers pesticides and herbicides you apply cannot be utilized efficiently If they are not absorbed they can be washed away easily Even more serious they can be trapped near the surface in a concentrated form resulting in crop damage and yield reductions They can also be captured under the compaction zone compounding the problem

Binkley & Hurst Bros. Inc. Has A Gehl Spreader Ready For Your Farm And Here Are The Reasons Why Your Next Spreader Should Be A Quality Gehl!

Proven performance features, economical price make Gehl your box spreader choice

For over 129 years Gehl Company has been a leader in the design and construction of quality farm machinery This tradition of innovative design and durable construction is evident in the full line of economical box spreaders from Gehl With five sizes Gehl has the box spreader to fit your operation

Gehl-Tuff floor keeps manure moving — A good example of the innovative design in Gehl s box spreader is the Gehl Tuff gel coated fiber reinforced plywood floor The top surface has an extra slippery coating The coating is integrated with the underlying woven fiberglass which in turn is heat bonded to the top and bottom of the plywood This creates a smooth slick seamless panel The result is a specially constructed floor with top and bottom sealed against liquids and their acids to virtually eliminate decay and delamination

Handles the big loads — These full capacity spreaders can take a big load Heaped capacities range from 135 to 425 bushels Optional splash guards and side rails add 14 percent more capacity while protecting the sides from damage by front end loaders The optional hydraulic endgate rests in front of the beater paddles to secure sloppy loads and keep heaped material out of the beater until you re ready to spread

Unmatched durability — Each Gehl box spreader features an A frame hitch made of high strength steel This hitch connects to the axle to prevent twisting of the box while transporting or spreading in rough terrain

The spreader sides are made from Gehl Steel a tough corrosive resistant material The sides are smooth and straight easier to keep clean than corrugated sides And since no liners are required there s no chance for rust through caused by moisture trapped between the liner and the spreader sides or floor

A non corrosive high density polyethylene transmission shield provides long lasting protection of mechanical parts Because it s slicker than metal manure is left in your fields not stuck to the shielding

10-year warranty — All Gehl spreaders are built to last They carry a full 10 year warranty on the floor and sides

Dependable Gehl Spreaders carry the load

Scavenger® II. With A Gehl Scavenger®II you can spread liquids, semi-solids, pen-packed, even frozen manure A special feature is the heavy-duty patented square-tube auger that can be powered both up and down hydraulically to prevent bridging and cut through winter freeze-ups. See your Gehl dealer for more details.

FREE YOURSELF FROM SPREADER CHAINS AND SAVE MONEY

The proven Hydra-Spread design can free you from the grief and maintenance of spreader apron chains for good!

This low maintenance spreader features solid poly boards both on the sides and the floor for slippery, no-stick performance. Hydraulic push power replaces the extensive mechanism needed in ordinary spreaders.'

Why pay more for yesterday's ideas and designs? The design of tomorrow is PRICED RIGHT and will be on the job for years. We deliver to your farm.

3 SILOS AND UNLOADERS

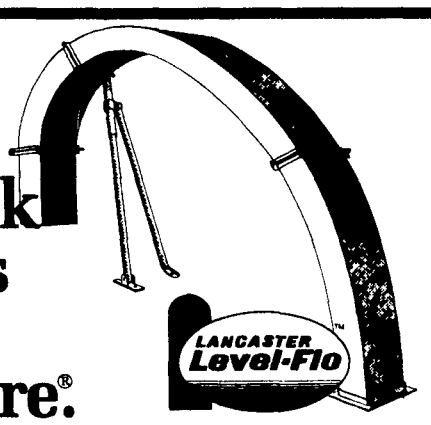
Our 12 inch gooseneck improves your Harvestore®.



Lancaster Level-Flo's replacement gooseneck lets you fill your silo faster and easier It has a 33% larger capacity than original Harvestore® goosenecks and its high-profile shape improves flow You can actually blow in 3 tons of haylage a minute without plugging the Level-Flo 12" gooseneck Yet it attaches easily to standard 9" fill pipe

Our gooseneck's completely enclosed design keeps silage off the roof of your silo Not only does this eliminate waste, it extends the life of the silo roof

With an outer shell of galvanized steel, the Level-Flo 12" gooseneck stays bright and shiny for years And it contains an inner liner of extremely wear-resistant stainless steel

- Designed with final section straight and vertical to put silage in the center of your silo
- And it's almost 50% less expensive than a Harvestore® replacement gooseneck

Harvestore® is a registered trademark of A O Smith Inc
